1 KILLED, 4 HURT IN WELLESLEY CRASH

POLICE ON TRAIL OF SLAYER

NEW YORK, June 22.—By quick stages the police net is closing around Leon Ling, the praying Chinaman who is believed to be the man who killed Elsie Sigel, granddaughter of Gen Fanz Sigel, over the chop suey restaurant in Eighth avenue.

When Chong Sing, the room-mate chum of Leon, who was trapped in Amsterdam, N. Y., came forth from his "Third degree" examinations by the New York police today, the authorities had almost positive proof that Ling is the murderer.

Chong broke down under one of the most rigid applications of the "Third Degree" methods ever known in New York Police Headquarters.

Saw Miss Sigel June 9.

He finally confessed that he had seen Leon Ling less than two weeks ago. He admitted that Elsie Sigel may have been in Ling's rom on June 9 and that Ling had a fist fight with Chu Gain in Pell street several days before the murder. Chong Sing was under police torture near fifteen hours before he broke down.

The Chinaman who was brought to headquarters by Lieut. Forbes after he had been captured near Amsterdam, N. Y., contradicted himself many times during the rigid cross questioning. He was terror stricken at the end of the ordeal, but the one declaration that he did not know where Leon was now was unshaken. He will be put through the third degree again within a few hours.

While Chong Sing was being questioned, word came to headquarters that a Chinese answering in part the description of Leon Ling had been arrested in Pittsburg and that a supposed friend of Ling named Joy Moy of New York had been arrested at the Grand Central Station in Chicago. Moy was said to be in possession of information which may lead to the arrest of Leon Ling and will be brought back to New York.

Chong Sing Big Witness.

It is through Chong Sing, however, that the police here hope to find Leon. They are convinced that he knows where Leon went when he left Nw York on the day the Sigel girl was murdered, and they believe that he will confess this after he is put through the "third degree" again.

Chong Sing was questioned by Deputy Commissioner Woods, Inspector McCafferty of the Detective Bureau, Captain Carey of the Homicide Bureau and Lieutenant Dunn. They and Chong Sing and a Chinese interpreter were closeted for several hours in one of the Detective Bureau's rooms.

Chong Sing speaks considerable English and most of his statements were made in that tongue. In response to the fire of questions from the four police officials, Chong Sing had this to say:

"I am thirty-five years old. I was born in Canton and came to San Francisco fourteen years ago. After four months in San Francisco I came to New York. I have been a cook and waiter in restaurants here. It was five years ago that I cut off my queue.

"I have known Leon Ling for the last five years. I became an intimate friend of his. I knew of his relations with Miss Elsie Sigel. I knew he was in love with her and that he was mad at Chu Gain, keeper of the Port Arthur restaurant.

"Leon Ling and Chu Gain had a fight two weeks ago. It was in Pell street. They fought over a girl. Leon and Chu tried to put each other's eyes out with their fingers. It was a big fight. Other Chinese stopped them and then Leon went away from Pell street.

"What girl was the fight over? Was it over the Sigel girl?" he was asked.

Last Saw Sigel Girl.

"I don't know," answered Shong Sing. "It was over some girl, perhaps the Sigel girl."

"When did you last see her?"

"About two weeks ago, may be less than two weeks ago."

"Was it on June 9?"

"I don't think it was on June 9, but may be it was."

"Was she in Leon's room next to yours on that day?"

"I don't know; maybe. The door between the rooms was sometimes locked. Maybe she was there."

"Where were you on the night of June 8?"

"I was in my room. Maybe Leon was there. I don't know. I don't think I heard him. Maybe Miss Sigel was there. She went often to the room of Leon. She came by herself; he did not bring her."

"Where do you think Leon went when he went away."

Leon Has Many Friends.

"I don't know; he had many friends in many places. He did not go away with me. I went to the country to get a job. This is all I went away for. No jobs here any more, so I went to the country for a job."

The police say they will have Leon within a very few hours. This promise is based upon a happening at police headquarters connected with the examination of Chong Sing.

Hardly had Chong entered the building and been closeted with Inspector McCafferty and Deputy Police Commissioner Woods than a hurry call was sent to the domitory upstairs, and four detectives came tumbling down half-dressed. After receiving instructions they dashed out of headquarters, carrying their coats, collars and neckties in their hands. Then Chong Sing was subjected to the third degree.

The intense excitement on the part of the inspector and deputy commissioner and the haste with which the four detectives departed on their quest, observers declared, was a clear indication that something of

THE DRAGON'S CLUTCH

FARNUM STORY DENIED IN SUIT OF MRS. GOULD

NEW YORK, June 22.—Mrs. Howard Gould's real defence began to-day in Justice Dowling's courtroom when her attorney, C. J. Shearn, called witnesses to disprove the allegation that she entertained Dustin Farnum, the actor, at the Carroll House in Lynchburg, Va., in November, 1906.

It was not until several witnesses, including the former chef and hairdresser of Mrs. Gould, had testified that she was not habitually intoxicated, that William W. Linn, proprietor of the Carroll House, was called to the stand. Farnum's room was on the third floor of the house, while Mrs. Gould's rooms were in the building on the first floor. The bill for services rendered Mrs. Gould during her visit and her check paying for it wtre introduced to proved that the meals served to Mrs. Gould were for one und did not include the actor's.

"We make a charge of twenty-five cents extra for each meal served in rooms," Linn said. The bill showed an outlay of $46.40. Three rooms in Mrs. Gould's suite with the meals served, cost at the rate of $12 a day. The rest of the bill was for railroad tickets, $20.70, and other items.

Didn't Touch The Wine.

"The first time I lunched with Mrs. Gould there was wine on the table, but Mrs. Gould didn't touch it," Linn said.

"I never saw Mrs. Gould under the influence of liquor, although I think she occasionally did partake of a cocktail before dinner. Mr. Linn said that he had not seen Dustin Farnum arrive at the house the night in question. All he knew was that the actor registered for supper.

"Didn't you know that Mrs. Gould telegraphed Farnum to meet her at Cynchburg?" asked Nicol.

"I never heard that until now."

Sarcastically Mrs. Gould's lawyer showed that in Mr. Linn's Hotel there was no system of mirrors or women floor clerks to conduct a surveillance over guests, as existed in the Philadelphia hotels.

"A maid in the floor is supposed to report unusual occurrences to the office," Mr. Linn explained.

Lawyer Shearn called his first witness, James J. Brennan, at present janitor of the public school at Westbury, L. I.

"I was employed as general utility man at Castle Gould from May, 1904, until April, 1906," Brennan said. "I never saw Mrs. Gould intoxicated or even showing the least signs of having taken liquor."

"Did you ever hear Mrs. Gould swear?" asked Mr. Shearn.

"I did not, although there were times"—

The answer was not completed because of Mr. Nicoll's objection.

Denies Coachman's Story.

Special denial of the testimony given by Coachman Carlson against Mrs. Gould was then given by the witness. Brennan said that on the occasion when Carlson said he had to put his arm about Mrs. Gould to prevent her falling from a skeleton brake the fact was that Mrs. Gould "had a better position on the seat than the driver."

"Mrs. Gould supervised the laying out of the race course in the grounds and gave instructions in regard to putting up hurdles," he continued.

"I thought Mrs. Gould was the most democratic person I ever met."

'FLAGSTONE' CONTRACTS IN EVIDENCE

While former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald was waiting to be called as a witness today in the trial of Michael J. Mitchell, city purchasing agent under the Fitzgerald administration, and Thomas F. Maher, both of whom are charged with conspiring to defraud the city, District Attorney Hill offered as evidence five contracts for flagstone made by Mitchell for the city with Maher Brothers, who were represented by the defendant, Thomas F. Maher. The contracts totaled $27,575.41, and it is alleged the rake off was half that amount, or $13,787.70.

The district attorney read the list of contracts while Assistant City Auditor Julian C. Haynes identified them. A list of payments made on these contracts was also read and placed before the jury. District Attorney Hill then produced contracts made previous to the time when Mitchell acted for the city. These contracts were made between the city and M. H. Cudaby.

Compares Contract Figures.

Th Maher Brothers' bills were made out at 67 cents per square foot, while the Cudahy bills were made out for 67 cents per linear foot, which figures 33 1-3 cents per square foot. One bill by the Cudahy firm had the explanation written on it that there were two linear feet in one square foot. District Attorney Hill emphasized the fact, according to this evidence, that Cudahy furnished the city with flagstone at one-half the price that Maher Brothers did.

Assistant City Auditor Julian Haynes resumed the witness stand when the trial reopened. He identified the contracts as read by District Attorney Hill. He identified the signatures of Mitchell and Maher, the one acting for the city and the other for the contractor.

There were five contracts in all, covering a period from August 1, 1906, to April 9, 1907. During that time the city purchased 60,000 square feet of flagstone, all at 67 cents per square foot.

Extra Guard on Jury.

The reading of the list of contracts and the list of subsequent payments made on these kept Assistant City Auditor Haynes on the witness stand the greater part of the morning session.

Mitchell is the first of the officials of Fitzgerald's administration to be tried on the charge of grafting. The same precautions are being taken with the jury as were taken at the trials of former Alderman Battis and former President of the Common Council Leo F. McCullough. Policemen in plain clothes shadow the men continually when they are off duty.

Daniel H. Coakley is defending former City Purchasing Agent Mitchell, while Francis J. Carney is appearing for Maher.

Under cross-examination, Attorney Coakley secured from Assistant Auditor Haynes the admission that his office did not question the Maher bills when they found them billed at 67 cents per square foot, although the former bills had been paid at half that rate. Haynes admitted that it was not their business to question as long as the bill agreed with the contract and they had the O. K. of the department head.

Huge Stone Crushes Scaffolding on Gymnasium Building and Men Are Buried in Debris.

One workman was killed and four dangerously injured to-day when a huge block of granite intended for part of the coping of the new Wellesley gymnasium bore down a frail scaffolding on which the men were working to the ground, four stories below.

The dead man is:

Atler Carlson of No. 26 Tileston street, Boston. Crushed under part of granite block, which broke as it fell.

The injured are:

J. Carman of Natick, leg broken in two places, serious internal injuries; John Roberts, Joseph Boser of Newton Upper Falls and R. Peterson of Framingham.

The injured are in the Natick Hospital.

The accident hapened about 11 o'clock this morning. Workmen hoisted a block of coping granite weighing 1,250 pounds on the outside, or temporary, elevator to the fourth floor. Instead of shoving the heavy block into the place which had been prepared for it in the coping the big stone was dumped on the frail platform where the five men were at work.

The weight was too much for the scaffolding. With a crash the whole temporary structure was borne to the ground far below. The five men, the heavy granite block and the pieces of timber all hurled downward together, striking and bounding from the timbers of the scaffolding below.

As the stone fell it broke, and one great fragment crushed Atler Carlson to the earth. He died as he was being taken to the hospital. It is believed that the other men will all recover.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, June 22.—George Stallings and his tribe of Highland Kilties are in Boston to-day and will tackle the Red Sox this afternoon in the first of a short series, only two games being slated for this trip.

Manager Stallings holds the world's record for sport talk and in about three words stated that his team was all in good health and was ready to put up the best game of the season. The Hill Top darlings of the Big Town have been reposing on a slippery slide and have been steadily going down. However, they hope to regain their winning form and swipe the pair of contests from the Boston aggregation.

Manager Lake was there with the smile that won't come off and smiled harder than ever when he thought of how soft the Quakers were. He sent his boys into the fray this afternoon with the word, "Get the runs, I don't care how, just get 'em." Result: the Boston warriors went after the visitors in red hot fashion.

The fine weather enticed the bugs to the park and a good crowd witnessed the proceedings.

There is a chance of the Red Sox getting into second place, should they win to-day's game and the Philadelphia team lose. This made the locals more anxious than ever before to down the Highlanders.

FEARS YOUNG HUSBAND WAS ROBBER VICTIM

Mrs. May Jasper, a bride of seven weeks, is almost prostrated over the disappearance of her young husband, Harry R. Jasper. He kissed her goodbye at their home No. 2 Melbourne street, Dorchester last Friday morning, went to his work and dropped from view. Mr. Jasper was employed as a salesman by James G. Haynes & Co.

"I can't imagine what has become of him," said the bride today. "He was in the habit of carrying a good deal of money and I fear he has been held up and possibly hurt and can't come home."

"The police are helping me but they have no clew on which to wrk. We met when I was on the stage in the chorus. I am a Boston girl. Harry and I were married at St. Joseph's Catholic Church on May 9. We went to housekeeping on May 30. Harry ate breakfast last Friday morning. He was in good spirits, I thought. When he left I said: 'You'll be home at 5:30, won't you, Harry?'

"'Yes, if nothing happens,' he said to me. Even then I thought this reply a little strange. Now, I don't know what to make of it. He had no bad habits. He didn't drink. He sent me $5 in a letter that last day. He mailed the letter at 11:30 when he was at lunch."

The note read:

Dearest:—Here is $5. That is enough for c. o. d. shopping.
Ever your own,
Daddy.

Here is a kiss.

"We were at the circus together last Thursday afternoon," continued Mrs. Jasper. "Harry was lame. He often used to say that because he had a stiff leg that I was ashamed to walk with him. That's absurd, for I just loved the ground he walked on. At the store they're just as mystified as I am."

Harry Jasper is twenty-eight years of age, five feet six inches in height, weighs 160 pounds and wore a blue serge suit, a Panama hat, a dark blue bow tie, black oxfords and a white shirt. He is quite lame.

DRAPER SEEKS A REPUBLICAN

Governor Draper, it was announced at the State House to-day, will probably be able to announce at to-morow's meeting of the Council the names of the five members of the new Finance Commission. So far the following four members have practically been decided upon according to the best information obtainable:

John A. Sullivan, Democrat, to be chairman; John F. Moora, Democrat; Geoffrey Lehy, Democrat; C. P. Curtis, Republican.

Governor Draper is looking for a Republican to fill out the list. It was said to-day that Robert Homans had declined to accept an appointment. The Governor is considering a long list of men that has been submitted to him as available candidates.

SPAIN'S QUEEN HAS NEW BABY

MADRID, June 22.—The Queen of Spain gave birth to a girl baby this morning. The accouchement took place in the royal palace of La Granja. Mother and child are reported by the court physicians to be doing well.

King Alfonso presented his new born daughter in a basket to the ministers and grandees. The King also issued a general amnesty and liberated criminals of a certain class. The birth of the royal infant is being celebrated throughout the entire nation.

MANY NEW YORK VICTIMS OF THE EXTREME HEAT

NEW YORK, June 22.—Summer's first hot wave to-day had claimed five victims, while seven others were prostrated and had to be taken to the hospital.

PROSTRATIONS.

JOSEPH LUIA, aged fifteen, employed at the Doten & Dunton Desk Company, No. 208 Broadway, Cambridgeport, overcome at work. Cambridge Relief Hospital.

JOSEPH LUKE, aged forty-five, of No. 15 Margaret street, North End, overcome on Sumner street, East Boston. East Boston Relief Hospital.

GEORGE H. MITCHELL, aged eighteen, of Harwich, overcome in front of No. 15 Exchange street. Relief Hospital.

FRANK KALISAH, thirty-four, overcome by heat at T wharf this afternoon. He was removd to the Relief Hospital.

ANNIE K. CHASE, of No. 282 Main street, Everett, overcome by heat in front of 62 Summer street. Removed to Relief Hospital.

LOUISE WEEKS, twenty-five years of age, overcome while working in the Williams & Pond shoe factory at 1 o'clock. Sent home. Connition reported serious.

Hottest day of the year!

Maximum? There didn't seem to be a high point to-day, a mark where the mercury was content to halt in its upward climb.

Man and beast panted, sweltered and gasped under the blinding rays of the sun, shot down from a cloudless sky. There was the menace of death in the fierce sunshine. Two deaths and seven prostrations were yesterday's record. To-day is hotter than yesterday, when the official mercury climbed to 89 and then slowly receded in the tube.

All over the East it's sizzling hot to-day. Boston got the benefit of a light breeze which helped a little, but not much. Other cities reported high temperature and many prostrations.

What's worse—the Weather Bureau isn't promising any relief to-morrow. Every man, woman or child in Boston who could hurried to the beaches this afternoon. Those who couldn't stayed in the baking city and suffered.

"Ninety degrees," said the thermometer at noon.

"Going up," it also said, and this was worse.

Concord, N. H., is the hottest city in New England to-day, but Boston is running it a close second.

Wouldn't it be fine to be in Yellowstone Park to-day? The temperature there at 8 this morning was but 38 degrees. Why, away down South at Key West it's only two degrees hotter than here.

The beaches were crowded yesterday and at the L street bath 10,000 persons took a dip in the briny, while at Revere Beach bath house the turnstiles registered 1,700.

Scores of people unable to sleep within doors last night moved out upon the rooftops, piazzas and fire escapes. In the suburbs cars were crowded all evening by people trying to avoid the heat of the city.

Edward Garrity, thirty-five years old, of No. 64 Otis street, Cambridge, collapsed in the West End and died a few minutes later. It was not long after that Mrs. James Owen, sixty-three years old, of No. 49 Wainwright street, Dorchester, was walking along Somerset street and collapsed. She was taken to the home of Mrs. A. E. Twitchell and died shortly after.

BURKETT TELLS ABOUT SALE OF BALL PLAYERS

The hearing before Judge Dana of Alfred G. Doe against the Worcester Base Ball Club to recover a share of the money for the sale of the players, Lord, Chadbourne and Bushey, was continued to-day and the proceedings were replete with talk about "covering" players.

General Charles H. Taylor identified the checks sent to the Worcester club for the sale of Bushey, Lord and Chadbourne. The general said that he left the details of the management of the Boston American Baseball club to his on, John I. Taylor. He said that he was not very familiar with the rules of the National Commission but hat he believed that it was illegal under the regulations to cover players.

General Taylor said that he knew nothing about the deals for players. That part of the business he left to his son. General Taylor admitted that Lord, Chadbourne and Bushey had been farmed out to the Providence club by the Boston Americans.

Duffey on the Stand.

Manager Hugh Duffey of the Providence baseball team testified that the three players had been farmed out to him for the season of 1907.

Jesse Burkett, manager and part owner of the Worcester club, against whom the suit aws instituted, testified that the deal over Lord, Chadbourne and Bushey was simply a case of covering players. He said that Frack, Sline, Knox and Bushey had been taken by the late George B. Dovey of the Boston Nationals.

Burkett testified that Dovey told him that he wanted to protect Doe on the Bushey matter and, therefore, he included Bushey with Frock and Knox and left out Sline, taking Bushey instead.

"Dovey sent us a check for $2,000," said Burkett. "Of this $750 was for Frock, $750 for Knox and $500 for Bushey. Two days later the Worcester Club sent the $2,000 back to Dovey. This transaction is known as 'covering', for it held these men for us.

Gave Bushey Release.

"Bushey played with us for two months and I released him then for several reasons, principally because he was not in good condition. In the Spring of 1907 I went to New York in reseponse to a telegram from Doe to attend a conference at the Fifth Avenue Hotel at which John I. Taylor, Secretary Hugh McBreen of the Boston Americans; Manager Hugh Duffey of Providence, Fred Doe and I were present. They needed my signature in order that the Boston Americans might have the right to sell Lord and Chadbourne to the Providence club."

The attorneys had a long argument about whether Burkett should tell what took place at this meeting and about the exhibiting of the contract for the players. Taylor, it developed, said there was no contract.

BURGLAR TELLS ABOUT FATAL FLIGHT

WILFORD, June 22.—Lured from his sliding place in an old log cabin by a peculiar whistle which he thought was a call by a girl friend, Ralph R. Harding, nineteen-year-old boy sought, in connection with the murder of Constable Miller at Oxford Heights Sunday, was arrested early to-day.

In court at Webster Harding was held charged with murder.

Harding's story, as told to the police, is as follows:

"Frank and I were returning from Webster, where he had entered a place and taken $50, when we passed by the place at Oxford Heights. Seeing the slot machines Frank gave me the $50 to hold while he went in to break open the machines. I was to stand guard and let him know if anyone approached.

"Frank made considerable noise trying to break open the machines, and this evidently aroused the constable. The first thing I knew was when I heard a man say, 'Throw up your hands.' I turned to see Constable Miller, a club in his left hand and a revolver in his right.

Clubbed by Constable.

"Frank heeded the command of the officer and put his hands high over his head. I wouldn't throw up my hands. Then, when he saw I would not obey him, he ran at me and struck me a blow over the head with his club, which knocked me half-conscious. As I lay there I have a very distinct recollection of hearing shots. I do not know how many shots were fired, or who did the shooting.

"When I came to I found my brother and the officer on the ground. Both were dead. By the side of each was a revolver. I picked up both revolvers, put them in my pocket, and walked down the road toward Auburn. On the Auburn road, where I came across Wellington, I threw the revolvers away. I know where they are and can get them at my leisure.

"From Auburn I walked the railroad track to Worcester, and there took the electric to Uxbridge. From the latter place I came to this town by electric, getting off the cars about a mile and a half from my home. Then I went right home.

"I Am No Murderer."

"When I met father at the door I told him the entire story. Then, knowing that the officers would be after me, I went into the woods and hid in the old log cabin.

"Before my God I had nothing to do with either Constable Miller's death or the death of my brother. I may have been mad, but I am no murderer."

Young Harding blames his brother for the trouble. He says the plan was forced on him to accompany him wherever he went.

AUTO SPEEDERS FINED IN QUINCY

Charles A. Howland of Quincy, president of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Epic Courtney of Lowell and D. Costello of Boston were arraigned before the Quincy Court to-day for overspeeding on the metropolitan park Quincy shore reservation. They were fined $20 each, which they paid. Arthur T. Kelly of Milton was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction for transportation of his wife. Kelly was left some years ago $32,000 by his mother. His bail to-day was fixed at $200, but no one came forward to pay it.

WILSON DENIES HE IS TO QUIT CABINET

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson to-day declared most emphatically that the statement published to-day that he intended resigning the coming Fall is entirely without foundation. He has no intention of leaving the cabinet, he said, and added that if President Taft desires his resignation he knows nothing of it. "The hint from the President will be the only cause of my resigning," he concluded.

McCUMBER PLEADS FOR DUTY ON HIDES

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The tariff bill was taken up at once for consideration in the Senate to-day. After several minor changes were made in different schedules, the hide amendment was taken up. Senator McCumber of North Dakota addressed the Senate in favor of the duty on hides.

"SAND SNIPE" GETS A $15,000 VERDICT

NEW YORK, June 22.—Cora Sinclair, who sued Samuel Laird, Jr., the son of a Philadelphia millionaire, for $50,000 for breach of promise, was awarded a verdict of $15,000 to-day by a jury. Laird in his answer to Miss Sinclair called her his "little sand snipe."

COURT BATTLE IS LOST BY HEINZE

NEW YORK, June 22.—Judge Hay in United States Circuit Court to-day overruled the demurrer in the cases of A. P. Heinze and Manford Robinson, indicted for obstruction of justice. District Attorney Jerome then announced that he would begin trial of Heinze to-morrow morning, and that of Robinson would follow.

FATHER CREEDON OF EAST BOSTON DEAD

Rev. Michael Creedon, senior curate and acting pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church in East Boston, died to-day in a private hospital in East Bridgewater, where he had gone to recuperate from pulmonary troubles. Rev. Father Creedon, who would have celebrated his thirtieth birthday on Friday, was taken ill three weeks ago. Rev. James H. O'Neil, pastor of the church, recently sailed for Ireland, and the young clergyman was placed in charge of the parish during the pastor's vacation. Rev. Father Creedon was educated in the parochial schools of Newburyport, St. Michael's College, Toronto, and St. John's Seminary, Brighton. He was ordained as a priest in the Cathedral in 1903.

COURT HOLDS TWO IN MANSLAUGHTER

In the Cambridge District Court to-day William Rowan, aged thirty-five, of No. 4 Linehan court, and Alfred S. Gilmore of No. 8 Rowland avenue, East Cambridge, who were charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Dennis O'Neill, aged forty-seven, of No. 6 Winter street, East Cambridge, were each held in $2,000 for a hearing Thursday, July 1. O'Neill was assaulted at the corner of Winter and Gore streets, East Cambridge, last Saturday night, and died at his home early today. After an autopsy, Medical Examiner William D. Swan said: "I find that there were some slight bodily injuries, such as fractured ribs. Death was not caused by violence."

SOUTH STATION CAR PROBLEM UP AGAIN

The railroad commissioners have officially taken notice of the matter of connections between the Park street subway station and the South Terminal station. The board will grant a hearing at an early date on the transfer question. Attorney Edward M. Parker sent to the board copies of letters which had passed between him and President Bancroft of the Boston Elevated. Mr. Parker asked the road to transfer at Boylston street by means of which persons take a surface car at Boylston and Tremont streets. President Bancroft replied that such a transfer could not be issued.

MISSING REVERE BABY HOME AGAIN

After several days of anxiety and fear over the disappearance of the baby pet of the household, the family of Charles F. Keeley of Revere was made happy by the return of the missing child, who is three years old.

The baby is the child of Mrs. William O'Brien, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keeley, who is living with her parents. A friend of the family, Miss Alice Moore, took Willis with her on a car ride to Boston. They did not return, and it was feared something serious had happened.

The grandfather applied to the Boston police for the apprehension of Miss Moore, but on reaching home found that Miss Moore had returned with the baby.

POLICE NET IS CLOSING ABOUT SIGEL GIRL'S CHINESE SLAYER

Dead Girl Buried in Lonely Grave, with Greatest Secrecy by Family.

more than usual importance was on foot. Trained crime hunters are little prone to get excited about even an opportunity for an arrest in a case as important as is the murder of the Sigel girl.

Forbes, when he turned over his prisoner, also gave McCaffery a package wrapped in brown manila paper and sealed in a dozen or more places. He said it had been handed him by Chief of Police Packwood of Amsterdam, who cautioned him that its contents were most important, and that he should never allow it out of his sight until it had been handed to Forbes's chief. From the appearance and weight of the bundle it is believed to contain clothing.

When Chong was led into headquarters it was remarked at once that he looked more like a ghost than the full-faced, healthy young Chinese as pictured in the police description. The man has failed very much since he was last in the city, detectives say. He bears hardly any resemblance at all to the picture which was circulated on handbills to the authorities in other cities. His face is pinched and wan, and the characteristic high cheek bones of the Mongolian race, which three weeks ago were well concealed, stick out.

Letter Fastens the Crime.

The Chinaman arrested at Schenectady was probably released to-day. At first the police were almost positive that he was Leon Ling, but it was subsequently found that he was Chu Hop, a New York Chinaman.

Important Witness Found.

Next to the capture of Choong Sing was the unexpected appearance of Son Leung, the proprietor of the restaurant at No. 782 Eighth avenue, who rented the sleeping rooms to Leon Ling and Choong Sing, at police headquarters after detectives had searched for him for two days. He is regarded as a very material witness. He made the report to the police which led to the finding of the body.

The body of Elsie Sigel was quietly buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, while the police of a hundred cities were actively searching for Leon Ling. With the greatest haste and secrecy the remains of the unfortunate victim of mission work among the Chinamen of this city was taken from the undertaking establishment, where it had been removed from the Sigel home but a few hours before, and followed only by the broken-hearted father and the two brothers of the girl, was taken to the family vault. Not one carriage to make a pitiful procession.

The grave had been dug hurriedly, as though for a victim of some terrible plague, and the absence of mourners, aside from the three men, and with not a woman to shed tears as the coffin was lowered into the grave.

Paul Sigel, the proud father of the slain girl, who for days refused to visit the body in order to acknowledge that his daughter could have been slain by her Chinese wooer, made the arrangements for the funeral.

Mr. Sigel told only his priest and those that the body of Elsie was to be buried in a few hours. He wanted no other witnesses or mourners. The mother, her mind shattered by the blow of her daughter's frightful death, was in a sanitarium in Connecticut.

Without a prayer or ceremony of any kind, the body was lowered into the grave. After it had been filled the father and brothers quietly departed.

Miss Mabel Sigel, cousin of slain girl, and Paul Sigel, Elsie's uncle, identifying clothing of dead girl in New York morgue.

BOSTON PASTORS SAY WHITE GIRL SHOULD NOT TEACH CHINESE

Boston clergymen are emphatically opposed to white girls teaching Chinamen or associating with them in any way. The startling Sigel tragedy in New York has called forth vehement utterance on this question from many of the most prominent religious workers of this city. Frederick A. Bisbee, editor-in-chief of the Universalist Leader, declares that he would not have a decent white girl or any woman he cared for associate with Chinamen. Bishop Mallalieu of the Methodist Episcopal church is also outspoken in his disapproval of the custom. Other clergymen also discuss the matter in the following interviews:

Dr. FREDERICK A. BISBEE, Editor-in-Chief of the Universalist Leader:

I have lived with and dealt with the Chinese in this country and abroad and I know the Chinese. Of this I am most emphatic: I would not for the world have a daughter of mine or any one for whom I cared have any dealings whatever with them. Our girls are romantic. They are adventuresome. Women were never more so.

They think teaching the Chinese an adventuresome thing and protected by the church and therefore safe. As a matter of fact it is very far from safe, and I do not approve of sending either old or young ever teaching the Chinese as individuals or in small classes.

To me the Chinamen use religion in America and especially where American girls are concerned, as a means to an end, namely to learn the English language and to get acquainted with American girls.

Teaching Chinese men I consider hazardous in the extreme for American women. I wish I could speak to the contrary, but I know the Chinese to be treacherous, sodden, immoral and dangerous as associates in any capacity with American women and girls.

The Rev. HOWARD ALLEN BRIDGMAN, a Well-known Congregational Minister, Managing Editor of The Congregationalist:

This Sigel girl's case is a rare exception and little judgment can be formed as to the hazards of women as teachers of the Chinese because of this case, which I consider as of too rare a nature to count for much in drawing any general conclusions.

The Rev. Dr. D. W. WALDRON, Secretary of the Boston Missionary Society:

In all our experience—we missionaries and teachers—we have never had a case of this kind to deal with. It is a rare thing, I should say, and not to be given too much weight in deciding whether or not American girls should be teachers of the Chinese. I will say this, however, that I certainly do not approve of young women as teachers for Chinamen. We always choose older women and keep on the safe side.

Mrs. C. M. LAMSON, Editor of the Congregational Missionary Paper, Life and Light for Women:

I do not consider it dangerous for our women to teach the Chinese in classes. It would not be wise for young women or any others to teach them outside of class rooms and the more in a class the better. A great deal is every case, of course, depends upon the woman. I cannot conceive of a woman of the character of our missionaries getting into any unpleasantness or danger from her work as teacher or missionary.

The Rev. W. E. STRONG, editor of the Missionary Herald, and a Congregationalist of prominence:

Women are quite necessary as teachers of the Chinese in this country for this reason: The first thing to do with the Chinese pupil usually is to teach him English. This takes more patience and time than a man can give to it, usually, and it necessarily falls to women.

The classes are often crowded and usually have to be small from the nature of the work. The women who teach them are, however, usually women of character and tact, and their own integrity, together with the safeguards that the schools throw around their workers make it quite safe in general for them to do this important work.

On the other hand, of course, it must be remembered that the Chinese in this country represent the coolie class who are degraded and ignorant, have little restraint of custom and family and education, and whose ideas of morality are certainly far from coming up to our standards. In dealing with them women need to be prudent, tactful, dignified and above reproach in their relations with them.

The Rev. GEORGE WHITTAKER, D. D., Historian of the Methodist Church:

I had charge of the Chinese when in charge of Grace church, Worcester, and I noticed that the Chinese wanted as teachers the young and beautiful women and would not receive at times as elderly women. I never saw anything improper and each pupil at times had an individual teacher.

BISHOP W. F. MALLALIEU, of the Methodist Episcopal Church:

I most decidedly disapprove of the method of employing either young or old women to teach or associate with Chinese men in private rooms and this with all best wishes for the Chinese.

The Rev. L. B. BATES, D. D., of East Boston:

I had a test with the Chinese for five years in the Bromfield Street Methodist Church. I never saw any improperly when they were taught in public way. Our young ladies at times had five or six Chinese to teach. They seem to prefer women teachers to men, because women were more patient in their methods.

The Rev. L. W. STAPLES, D. D., Pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Cambridge:

I think women with Chinamen are as safe as with a good many Americans. The work that young women have done is a very commendable one. The system is a good one if properly carried on, and much has resulted from it.

The Rev. A. J. HUGHES, D. D., First Baptist Church, Everett:

All the Chinese should be taught in as public a way as possible. We can't be too careful in our methods and we can't allow them — get beyond our control, as is apparent in some instances.

The Rev. W. A. WOOD, D. D., Winthrop Street Methodist Church:

I want the Chinese to have a fair chance, but we must use the proper safeguards in our methods. The Sigel murder will have the effect of making us more careful and considerate, and may lead to some necessary changes, which I advocated in my work in Waltham.

The Rev. RALPH F. FLEWELLING, Pastor of Harvard Street Methodist Church, Cambridge:

I don't believe it is right for a young woman to teach Chinese in a small room, as has been often done. It is a poor judgment that would lead anyone to decide differently.

The Rev. C. H. STACKPOLE, D.D., First Methodist Church, Malden:

On general principles I think we need to use more care in allowing young women to teach the Chinese. Certainly it is very unadvised to allow a young woman to teach them in a small room.

The Rev. E. E. MERRIAM, D. D., Editor of "The Watchman":

I have always objected to a woman teacher of the Chinese, who does that work individually. Would she object to teaching to a class it is not so objectionable.

The Rev. R. O. SHERWOOD, D. D., Pastor First Baptist Church, Attleboro:

I believe in this work generally, but I have never been willing to encourage individual young girls to teach Chinese in Sunday schools as individuals. I see no objection to placing them before the Chinese in classes under careful supervision.

POLICE HOLD TWO IN DEATH MYSTERY

Mystery surrounds the death early today of Dennis O'Neill, aged 47, at his home, No. 6 Winter street, East Cambridge. William Rowan of No. 4 Linehan court, and Alfred S. Gilmore of No. 8 Rowland avenue, that city, are under arrest charged with manslaughter.

O'Neill's death is supposed to have resulted from injuries received in an assault on him late Saturday night at Winter and Gore streets. No report of the occurrence was made to the police at the time. The first they knew of it was when Dr. Francis A. Sullivan notified Lieutenant Hall of Station 3 of O'Neill's death. Acting on information furnished by Dr. Sullivan, Lieutenant Hall ordered the arrest of the two men.

SERIOUSLY HURT IN FALL FROM TRAIN

John Dugan, twenty-seven, No. 6 Perry street, Worcester, is on the dangerous list at the Newton Hospital with a fractured spine, several broken ribs and other injuries. He was found unconscious early to-day on a ledge of rocks skirting the Boston & Albany Railroad near the Wellesley station. From the Worcester police it was learned that Dugan came to Boston yesterday. The crew of the Springfield freight from Boston last night say that Dugan "jumped" it. There is a sharp curve where Dugan was found, and it is thought that he fell from the train.

KILLED BY HALLUCINATION.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Driven insane by the hallucination that he had killed a child in a turnstile of the Erie Railroad Station at Binghamton, Herbert Van Name, a railroad employe, committed suicide at the home of his brother-in-law in this city today.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Sembrich Cheered at Her Berlin Farewell.

BERLIN—When Mme. Marcella Sembrich made her triumphant farewell appearance on the operatic stage in the "Barber of Seville" at Kroll's Royal Opera House she was vociferously greeted by a packed house. Ambassador and Mrs. Hill, the members of the American Embassy staff and their wives, and Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, were present. All the men and women prominent in German music circles led the cheering at the final curtain. The prima donna was not in especially good voice, nor was the performance notable. As she was bowing her thanks a shower of American Beauty roses descended from the flies. The house broke in a bedlam of cheers, and when Mme. Sembrich recovered her equilibrium she stammered out a brief speech. Gathering up armfuls of roses, the prima donna threw them at the cheering audience, which stood shouting her till she was almost too exhausted to respond further to their plaudits. Mme. Sembrich says she expects to appear eighty times in concert in America next season at a profit of $100,000.

London Hotels Packed.

LONDON—The hotels here are crowded to the doors, hundreds of American tourists being turned away. The congestion is greater than during any other year at this season. Passengers from the Kronprinzessin Cecilie have in scores of cases had to spend hours searching for accommodations. Creighton Webb secured the town in a taxicab, and eventually got rooms in a private house. T. Sanford Beatty tried a dozen hotels before he got an uncomfortable room. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has refused the suite she ordered away in advance.

Jewelers Sue ex-Sultan.

LONDON—Having been closed up by Abdul Hamid, Constantin Bros., former court jewelers at Constantinople, have sued the former Sultan for damages. A warrant has just been issued ordering the dethroned Sultan to appear in court to offer his defence. A process server took the warrant to the Villa Ailatini, Abdul's prison residence, but was refused entry, being informed that he could only serve the writ through Chefket Pasha, the head of the army. The writ has now been sent to the governor of the villayet by the court.

Gendarmes Protect Horses.

PARIS—Horses for the race at St. Cloud were escorted from their training quarters by mounted gendarmes, in order to prevent a repetition of the disorderly scenes when forty members of the Stable Boys' Union attempted to prevent the running of the Grand Steeplechase. A petition of stable boys visited the Minister of Labor, M. Viviani, who has undertaken to mediate with the trainers.

Penny Sells for $1,375.

LONDON—In the course of a sale of coins at Sotheby's a penny of Wigfat, only one other of which is believed to be in existence, brought $1,375. Wigfat was King of Mercia about 825 A. D., just about the period when Egbert was beginning to weld the Saxon kingdoms into England.

American Bank Ready.

PEKIN—The International Banking Corporation will open its branch in that city on Wednesday.

IN GIRLHOOD AND WOMANHOOD

Dr. Williams' Blood Making Pink Pills Give Health and Strength.

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cures weak women by enriching and purifying the blood. It gives strength and health to every part of the body and enables each to do its work regularly and well.

Weakness soon results in impure blood, as it is a constant drag upon the strength of the entire body. Every woman knows how quickly stomach disorders follow weakness, with the result that there is a general lack of nourishment. The already overworked nerves become starved, and breakdown and nervousness is added to the misery of the sufferer.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the one medicine exactly suited to the needs of weak women. From the time she is developing into womanhood until the end of the fortieth year are passed, a woman needs the strength that pure blood alone can give.

Miss Matilda La Clair, a seamstress, of No. 55 Queen street, Lowell, Mass., after growing worse under the doctor's treatment, decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The cure they effected in her case causes her to recommend them to other suffering women. She says:

"I suffered for a year or more with female weakness, which was brought on by overwork. My cheeks and lips were white and I was miserable all the time. I had no appetite, was continually suffering from nervous, dizzy headaches and did not have strength enough to work. I did not sleep nights and thought I was going into consumption. I was treated by a doctor for three months and was sent into the country but was not helped at all. I was becoming worse and was discouraged. A friend in Vermont urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after I had taken them a short time I seemed to have some life and began to gain rapidly. I was soon myself again and took the pills until I felt entirely cured. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are certainly a good medicine for weak women and I shall always praise them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

BELMONT DIGS ON NEW CANAL

SANDWICH, June 22.—An interesting ceremony in connection with the construction of the Cape Cod canal was held at noon to-day on the old Perry estate on Bourndale, where the ancestors of Commodore Perry of Lake Erie fame and the direct ancestors of August Belmont on his mother's side were born and lived.

August Belmont, head of the Degnon Cape Cod Canal Construction Company, dug the first spadeful of earth.

Mr. Belmont and his party go over the route of the canal from this place to Buzzards bay, but they stopped for a ceremony and luncheon on the site of the Perry homestead.

Mr. Belmont opens the first ground for the actual building of the canal.

POOR PEDLER A GOLD MINE

The Dorchester police are talking to-day of a shock they got when Patrolman Mike Sullivan brought in a Greek pedler. He was taken up for peddling without a license. He said he was Christos Bernarsos of No. 8 Baldwin street.

"Why didn't you get a license?" he was asked.

"Oh, I poor man. I got no money," he said shrugging his shoulders. Then the police began to dig. From every pocket Sullivan dug hands full of copper and silver. Then from inside roll after roll of bills and finally a belt filled with gold pieces.

"The whole thing figures $3,500," said the lieutenant when he got through counting. Judge Joseph R. Churchill to-day assessed the Greek a $5 due.

FIND BROKER'S WIFE STABBED

NEW YORK, June 22.—Mrs. Mary Casey, wife of Thomas B. Casey of No. 902 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, a lawyer and prosperous curb broker, was found unconscious on a bench in her home to-day suffering from a stab wound in the abdomen. She was hurried to the J. Hood Wright Hospital, where she may die. The police are working on the case.

Absolute cleanliness and purity are two strong points in favor of "Salada" Tea.

FIRST FLASHLIGHT PHOTOGRAPHS OF "JOAN OF ARC"

Pictures of Great Out-of-Door Performance, Taken at the Stadium Last Night Exclusively for the Boston American

THOUSANDS WILL SEE WONDERFUL PERFORMANCE AT STADIUM TO-NIGHT.

When up to a few hours ago all seemed close in the great stadium there is today that perfection of order down to the most minute of a myriad of details which augurs a brilliant success to-night for the greatest dramatic pageant ever presented on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. Miss Maude Adams, America's most talented actress, will play the part of the mystic Maid of Orleans, the beautiful Joan of Arc.

Miss Adams will appear under the auspices of the Germanic department of Harvard University and in the version written by Friedrich Schiller, often called the German Shakespeare. With interest all over the world centered on the life of the wonderful shepherd girl, who placed a lien of Joan trying to get seats at any price fugitive king back on his throne, with the that the Harvard authorities had to officially announce that no such seats would be offered.

All Seats Are Sold.

Every seat has been sold, and the announcement that a few admission tickets would be put on sale to-day gave such promise of a panic by the belated admirers of Joan trying to get seats at any price that the Harvard authorities had to officially announce that no such seats would be offered.

Every one of the prominent hotels is filled with delegations from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and some have come from the far West to attend.

The public are being warned against speculators who, it is alleged, are selling counterfeit tickets, and all such will be refused at the door.

The first note of the Symphony of Beethoven's "Eroica" will sound at 7:45 p. m., and there will be more than 100 pieces in the orchestra, under the direction of William Furst, of the Empire Theatre, New York. At 8 o'clock the great play begins and everybody must be seated as without absolute quiet it will be impossible for any to hear the beautiful lines.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company has made extensive preparations for meeting the extra travel that will result from the performance. Cars will run every two minutes to the stadium, by way of Western avenue, and every three and four minutes to Harvard square, between 6:30 and 7:45 p. m., starting from Court and Hanover streets, and cars for Harvard square by way of East Cambridge will leave the North station every three and four minutes between 6:30 and 7:45.

Two-Minute Service.

From the Park square subway cars for the Stadium by way of Western avenue will run every two minutes and to Harvard square on one-minute intervals.

Brookline and Roxbury patrons will reach the Stadium by transferring at Brookline village and taking special cars for Allston station, which is but a few minutes' walk from the Stadium.

Transfers may be obtained from South station surface cars for Boylston street station of subway, where Cambridge cars may be taken, and elevated passengers may leave the train at Northampton street and take surface cars for Harvard square.

Extra cars will be run from Arlington and North Cambridge and from Newton and Watertown, by way of Mt. Auburn.

At the close of the performance extra cars will be run from Harvard square and Western avenue to the various points from whence they came.

There will be 1,300 active participants in the performance. This includes about 300 men in armor on horseback, monks, citizens (men and women), nobles, choir boys, English and French infantry.

Joan will always appear, according to tradition, riding the only white horse that will be seen upon the field, carrying aloft her "Jesus, Maria" banner. According to Schiller, the maid of France never raised her sword.

Should it rain to-night the performance will be given to-morrow evening, and if that is impossible on account of the weather, then Thursday.

Gets Duplicate of Banner.

President Lowell of the University presented Miss Maude Adams with an exact duplicate of the original Joan of Arc banner, which in turn had been presented to him for Miss Adams' use by the Baroness de Bailleux of Paris. The banner, accompanied by a dozen silver memorial medals, copies of those worn by the people of France that were faithful to Joan, and a set of ribbons made in the colors of Joan of Arc, and of the design used upon her uniform, arrived from Paris at President Lowell's office yesterday, whence they were immediately forwarded to Miss Adams. It is expected that Miss Adams will carry the banner, substituting it for the one already made, during the coronation processional and battle scene at tonight's performance.

The gift was accompanied by a letter written in the Baroness's own hand, in which great enthusiasm and happiness is expressed over the nature of the performance, and every good wish for its success and honor to Miss Adams offered to the University and to the actress.

For several weeks rehearsals of the play have been going on in New York at the Empire Theatre. To facilitate the rehearsals, Miss Adams has been using a small model of the Stadium, arranged as it will appear for the production.

Miss Adams arrived in Boston Sunday and the next day began her rehearsals in the Colonial Theatre. The supernumeraries have been practicing in the Stadium during the week.

Work in the Stadium has been progressing rapidly, and the flat floor has been transformed into a hilly plain with a forest in the distance. The hill is in the background on the lefthand side of the stage, and up this Miss Adams will charge, with the troops behind her, to disappear among the trees in the distance. To heighten the illusion of perspective, a system of poles placed in a semi-circle behind the stage will support a large canvas cyclorama.

To Use Searchlights.

The system of illumination will be unique. Before the performance begins, flaming arcs will be placed around the top of the Stadium to light up the entire arena. Just previous to the opening of the play, these will be turned out and two searchlights, placed high up in the bow of the Stadium, will be lighted. The searchlights are 36 inches in diameter, which is eight inches larger than those used by any of the battleships. A complete system of emergency lights has been installed in case there should be any difficulty in using the others.

All the announcing of calls, which is done in a theatre by a call boy, will be performed by an intricate system of electric lights. An elaborate switchboard, much resembling the "hood" used on the stage in grand opera representations, has been built in the centre of the bowl of the Stadium. On this board are switches controlling red, white, green and amber lights. Wires from this board run to the dressing rooms, in which the same color lights are placed, and to a series of poles planted about the stage, out of view of the audience, and similarly equipped.

The different lights answer the purpose of the announcements of the call boy, and when the director at the switchboard flashes a signal, it is taken up at once by one of his assistants behind the stage, and, through a return system, the same colored light flashed by the stage manager reappears on his board a moment later, indicating that the signal has been seen and understood.

Lightning and Thunder.

The illusion of thunder and lightning, of falling rain and of passing clouds will be produced by mechanical effects.

Under the seats of the audience, in the west side, the 1200 men of the "extras" dress. Here are orderly, clothes racks for the citizens' apparel of the society supernumeraries, all numbered and lettered, corresponding to the numbered and lettered tickets which the "supes" have.

Opposite them are long rows of tables with the costumes, each neatly folded and surmounted by its helmet or hauberk, also numbered and lettered. It is not possible for a man to get the wrong costume, if he can read.

On the other side of the stadium are the women's dressing rooms; these have been boarded in, and are better rooms than those in many theatres. Here the same system obtains, and Mme. Klug, the pretty French mistress of costumes, has as complete order as H. W. Baldwin and H. Jeffrey, who dress the men. These latter, by the way, have eight assistants to handle their horde.

Under the runs are the sheep and goat pens, and in the church, right enough, is a fully constructed organ loft, with two fine instruments installed. On the east side is the motor plant, furnishing the power for all the lights and for the storm devices.

Directing the Play.

And as the keyboard to the show, right in the middle, under the rail in front of the audience, is the control board whence Stage Director Gilmore handles the whole play. He has three entrances to give cues to and a bandstand. In front of him is a row of switches, controlling groups of lights at the entrances.

There are four lights, which he can by pressing his switches show in any desired combination, and it is by these light signals that the entrance cues and the music cues are given.

Manager Alf Hayman stood in the light of lead where everybody could see him and did business steadily. Around him buzzed an army, each section intent on a particular piece of work, and all hands working hard.

As time went on, first appeared Miss Maude Adams's beautiful white charger, which was straightaway "rehearsed" over the mountain passes, east with the banner —which he didn't at all like at first.

Men and women of the principals, instantly identifiable as actors, drove into their dressing rooms with their makeup boxes, and finally Miss Adams herself, dressed in brown velvet and looking a

Diseases of the Hair

The scalp is the seat of many hair diseases. Out of the pores of the scalp constantly comes an oily secretion, together with cast-off cells and waste matter that Nature has no further use for. The oily secretion is intended to keep the scalp moist and supple, and to give lustre and beauty to the hair. However, dust, dirt and disease germs floating in the air settle upon the head, and the oily secretion holds them fast. In time scales and dandruff form, the pores become clogged, and the first thing you know your hair begins to fall out. A child ought to see that the hair isn't at fault, but the scalp. You don't need a "tonic" or "grower" or "renewer" or "rejuvenator." Most of those things are rank frauds. If you have tried them, you know it. What you need is a cleanser. The trouble with soaps and shampoos generally is that they remove all the oily secretion from the hair and the scalp, and rob them of the very thing that Nature provided to keep the head moist and supple, and the hair lustrous. You are advised to try Birt's Head Wash, which is not merely something to clean the scalp and hair, but it replaces the oil that it removes. There is in it a free oil that leaves on both the scalp and hair just about the same amount of oily matter that Nature herself supplies. Birt's Head Wash cleans the head thoroughly, and when you are through your hair will have a beautiful lustre and sheen, and the scalp will be delightfully clean. It makes a fine, thick, creamy lather, and is so carefully proportionated that it can be used alike upon the heads of men, women and children. There is printed upon each jar of Birt's Head Wash the following formula, showing just what it is made of: Refined Soap, Glycerin, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs and Salicylic Acid. Any professional man familiar with hair and scalp troubles will tell you that this is as good and reliable a preparation as you can buy. Price 50 cents at all druggists.

EXTRAORDINARY SPECTACLE IN THE STADIUM TO-NIGHT

Maude Adams, and Company of 1,500 Persons and Horses, in Most Remarkable Scenic Show Ever Given in Open Air

At top in left hand corner, Mr. Sabine as Lionel; large picture in center at top, one of the striking scenes during the dress rehearsal; adjoining large picture on the right, mother of the King; last picture on the right, Mr. Burbeck as Du Chatel; at bottom, Miss Beatrice Agnew as Agnes Sorel.

Performance at Stadium to Be Most Extraordinary Spectacle Ever Seen in America.

very tired little woman, appeared. Then there were conferences and discussions, with the actress as the central figure, straight on until 6 o'clock.

Tests by Electricians.

The hammers of the stage mechanics were still going when the rehearsal began in full daylight. Jack Meyer, who is chief electrician of the production, had his apparatus at the testing point, and went through his tests and a sandwich at the same time. That was his only supper.

"Ed" Wentworth, assistant stage carpenter under Adam Tate, drove his gangs as they had never been driven before, and by the time the militiamen, who are to be French, Burgundian and English armies, were pouring across the great field, the mechanical setting of the production was fairly complete.

And then began that acute five hours of work that the public never sees—though a generous audience appeared from nobody knows where—a dress rehearsal. For the first time the various parts of the work were brought together and seen in their true colors.

Mr. Gilmore arranged and rearranged, running about at top speed when neither telephones to the entrances nor megaphones—all the managers used little megaphones—would do. Mr. Hayman was everywhere, and before the evening was half done Miss Adams herself took an active part in the stage management.

In Joan of Arc Role.

Audiences of recent times have seen three notable attempts to make the maid of France dramatically life-like—the Fanny Davenport production, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's performance, and, most recently of all, the Percy Mackaye "Joan of Arc," acted by E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe. Surely a greater array of genuine dramatic genius and artistic surety of touch could not be brought to bear upon any character. But if the Stadium performance demonstrates anything it will bring out the fact that it is only in an amphitheatre of Stadium dimensions, not in an ordinary theatre of conventional limitations, that the dramatic career of Joan of Arc can be adequately represented.

Maude Adams, a people's idol and an unusually gifted woman mentally, cannot hope to bring to bear upon the playing of Joan of Arc the statuesque beauty and heroic grandeur that her predecessors possessed to the full. But as they delighted the eye and the mind of the spectator by a completely finished single portrait of Joan, Maude Adams's purpose will be to impress her audience with a Joan of Arc, shepherd maiden as she was in appearance, heroic not so much by personal looks as by personal deeds, inspiring because of her simplicity and humility rather than by statuesque grandeur, and dramatically appealing, not through miraculous powers described as being exercised off-stage, but within the clear vision of her audience, and surrounded by the thousand and one historically explanatory details of her times.

In point of thought and resources lavished upon it, and a complete reversal of the usual dramatic way of handling the subject, the Maude Adams performance of "Joan of Arc" will undoubtedly stand for many years as the high-mark in this country for the spectacularly beautiful, the historically true and the dramatically vivid.

POPE'S FIRST RIDE IN AUTO

ROME, June 22.—The Pope enjoyed his first automobile ride to-day. It was taken in the Vatican gardens in a handsome touring car presented to him by the American Catholics. The car arrived to-day and shortly afterward the Pope expressed his desire to take a turn in it. After riding about the gardens of the Vatican the Pope left the machine and the chauffeur took it into the street, where crowds gathered and admired the car.

16,000 TROOPS IN MIMIC BATTLES

Approximately 16,000 men will be engaged in the grand maneuvers this Summer from August 14 to 21. The troops will live upon the United States army field ration. A system has been arranged for a military board to protect the rights of property holders and land owners. The manoeuvres involve an attack upon Massachusetts and a defence against invasion. Artillery and cavalry will be as nearly equal on both sides as possible, but Massachusetts will have the smaller number of men engaged. The State has three light batteries of artillery, and there will be three batteries on the side of the invaders. The three troops of cavalry of this State will be augmented by three troops of regular cavalry. All of the Massachusetts forces will mobilize on August 14, and the troops of the enemy are expected to arrive on the same day.

GRADUATION AT CHELSEA SCHOOL

Graduation exercises of the Chelsea High School took place to-day in the hall of the schoolhouse. Eighty-one diplomas were distributed, fifty-three to girls and twenty-eight to boys. Nine of the number were for four-year students. There was prayer by the Rev. R. Perry Bush, singing by the school chorus and vocal and instrumental music by the glee clubs of the school. The first honor essay was won by Miss Lillian L. Norse, and the second by Miss Mary C. MacKinney. The diplomas were awarded by Alton E. Briggs, member of the Chelsea Board of Control. The exercises closed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

PILL DEALERS ON ANNUAL OUTING

Six hundred delegates of the Massachusetts Pharmaceutical Association convened to-day at the New Ocean Hotel, Swampscott, for their twenty-eighth annual gathering. The session opened at 2.30 p. m. with Edward F. Leonard of Springfield as president. Charles H. Haskell, chairman of the Selectmen, made an address of welcome. To-morrow evening a banquet will be held, and Governor Draper will be present. The association will hold meetings for three days, and will discuss legislative matters of interest to druggists, patent medicines and their sales, the trade in spirituous liquors and the possibilities of the coming Summer trade.

ROBBERS GET $5,000 AT EXPRESS OFFICE

GREENBAY, Wis., June 22.—Two bandits entered the night office of the United States Express Company here early to-day and with a revolver compelled the man in charge to open the safe. They obtained $5,000.

KEENE'S HORSE WINS IN ENGLISH RACE

LONDON, June 22.—James R. Keene's Coronal won the juvenile plate race at Newbury to-day in a field of twenty-three starters. Coronal's odds were 8 to 4.

BURGLARS GET $3,000 AT BANK

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 22.—Between $3,000 and $3,500 were stolen and the building partially wrecked when burglars blew the safe of the Citizens' National Bank at Locke, Cayuga County, early to-day. The shock of the explosion alarmed the entire town and many ran into the streets, but hastily returned to their homes when the burglars began shooting, holding back pursuers and making their escape. There were several men in the gang. While some worked at the safe, others kept watch in front of the bank and others patrolled the street, keeping a keen watch for the authorities.

"LORD ASHBURTON" TRADES ON DRAPER

Charles F. Richards, "Lord Ashburton," was in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day before Judge Parmenter charged by J. Louis Buckenstrum, a restaurant keeper, with obtaining $25 from him under false pretences. Buckenstrum charged that Richards had passed a spurious check on him. At the request of the police the case was continued until Thursday next, and Richards was held in $200 bail. Buckenstrum said to-day that Richards had flashed a letter purporting to be from Governor Draper the time he got the $25 on his check on December 7 last.

RISKS LIFE TO RESCUE BABY

Risking her life to save Antoinette, the sixteen-months-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Muston of No. 342 Commercial street, Mrs. Sarah Fuchillo to-day rushed through a smoke-filled room and took the child from its cradle. Mrs. Fuchillo's clothing caught fire and in beating out the flames her hands were badly burned. The fire started in a bed in the Muston apartment. Mrs. Muston had gone to the roof to take in clothes, leaving the baby asleep in the cradle near the bed.

Mrs. Fuchillo, who occupies the suite above, smelled smoke as she was passing. When she opened the door of the bedroom, the smoke rolled out and drove her back. Then she heard the faint cry of an infant. Without hesitation she turned and groped her way to the child's side and brought it safely to the street. The cause of the fire is unknown. It did $25 damage.

CLASS DAY AT WILLIAMS.

WILLIAMSTOWN, June 22.—To-day was class day at Williams College. Preceding the class day exercises there was a meeting of the alumni society in Jesup Hall at 10 a. m. The withdrawal from college work of Rev. Dr. Ehen Burt Parsons, who has served as secretary of the association twenty years, was discussed, one of the principal speakers on this subject being Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, O.

JAIL HUSBAND AS WIFE SLAYER

Charged with killing his wife, Katherine, James McPhee, a structural steel worker of No. 60 Tileston street, South End, was to-day bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $2,500. Unable to procure bail he was locked up.

The woman, who was thirty-nine years old, was found lying on the floor of the bedroom shortly after 5:30 o'clock, according to McPhee. She was dead. He at once notified the police, and Special Officer William Irwin of the East Dedham street station was detailed on the case.

The police say that Mrs. McPhee had been drinking last night. They say neighbors living in the same house heard the McPhees quarreling and then the sound as of some person kicking another.

According to the police a woman in the house told them she heard Mrs. McPhee cry out: "I'm killed. I'm killed." Then the woman heard a man's voice call out: "Get up off the floor and get on the lounge."

There are several severe bruises on the body.

$2,500,000 CARGOES COME FROM ORIENT

Cargoes valued at $2,500,000 arrived to-day on board the Bucknell liner Bloomfontein and the Barnesr liner Dacre Castle. The Bloomfontein, Captain Linklighter, sailing from Calcutta and Colombo, was jammed full of East India products, jute, gunnies, tea, spices and hides, all valued at $1,000,000. The Dacre Castle, loaded with Japanese matting, curries, fine China crockery and copper ingots, took in the Japanese and Chinese ports and Singapore. She carried about 7,600 tons in all, valued at $1,500,000.

PARIS-LONDON IN AN AIRSHIP

LONDON, June. 23.—An air voyage from Paris to London is about to be attempted by a hitherto unknown airship. The announcement is made by Arthur Philip Du Cros, managing director of the Dunlop Pneumatic Tire Company, Limited, and secretary of the Parliamentary aerial defence committee.

This ship, which is now approaching completion, will have a capacity of 227,500 cubic feet, will have two propellers driven by two motors each of 220 horse power, and will carry twenty-five passengers in addition to supplies and petrol sufficient to last 700 miles. The speed will be from thirty-five to forty miles an hour and the ship can ascend to a height of 6,000 feet.

HARBOR POLICE GET BODY OF SWIMMER

The harbor police to-day recovered the body of John McCool, twenty-four years old, of No. 39 New street, South Boston, who was drowned while bathing yesterday off Mayo's wharf, East Boston. With James Golding and John Pitsold, he was swimming about fifty yards from the wharf when he was seized with cramps. His two companions made vain efforts to save him.

SOX NOW WITHIN 2 POINTS OF SECOND PLACE

NATIONAL LEAGUE SCHEDULE OFF FOR DOVEY BURIAL

TUB SPENCER, HERO, FOILS PLAN TO DOWN RED SOX IN GAME

He stood before the Sanhedrin.
The scowling Quakers gazed at him;
His record set of their pride or blame.
There was no fear, there was no shame;
For one upon whose dazzled eyes
The whole world gazed in vast surprise.
The open heaven was far too near,
His first day's light too sweet and clear
To let him waste his new-gained fame
The day that Tub got in the game.

It's but a short step in baseball from a piece of cheese to a hero, and Tub Spencer graduated from the Limburger rank yesterday.

Tub was it—very much it—in the second game of the double-header, the one that put Boston within two points of second place. It's the first time Tub ever was it, or anywhere near it, here in Boston, and that's what brought the curtain calls from the dazed fans, after they had recovered from their surprise sufficiently to get loud.

This may sound like a knock on Tub, but far from it. Tub is a willing horse, bat, heresiform, he has always carried overweight. The fans had come to regard Tub as a selling-plater, but Tub knew he was a stake horse all the time, and yesterday he decided it was time to let others into his confidence.

Tub didn't like to do it, either; for it was a hot day, but he was provoked into it. It was like this:

When the second game started, Joe Wood ambled into the pitcher's box and received an ovation. He looked pretty good to the fans and they wanted him to win his game. Then they looked behind the plate and discovered a large body partly concealed behind a liver pad and bird cage. Closer inspection proved that it was Tub. Several coarse rough-necks over back of first base said words. Tub heard them, and they sounded like aspersions, not only on his ability as a player, but on his personal appearance as well.

The grizzled his teeth and bided his time. All heroes do that.

Tub's time came in the third inning, after the hated foe had made one run. Tub wasn't at bat, and as he walked to the plate, Harold Fahrenheit Coombs, who was standing there over the scorer's desk, met the surly glint in his eye and quailed.

Fahrenheit sent one over and it was a strike. Again he thought that steely glint in Tub's eye and knew it was all evil. Realizing the futility of doing anything with Tub, he quit like a man and sent over four wide ones.

Tub started to foil the villainous pitcher in his dastardly attempt to further the conspiracy against him. He started to second with the intention of sacrificing. Had Barry known anything about irresistible force he would have given Tub the right of way and saved himself from being bumped half way to third. But he didn't, and Tub was the safest man at second you ever saw.

Tub had it all framed up with himself to steal third and then swipe the plate, just to show that he was in form, when Amby McConnell spoiled his plans by batting out one that put Tub on third.

Then it was that Tub forced Coombs again to show his class. The twirler was visibly nervous and was seen to glance over at Tub several times before delivering the ball. The look on Tub's face caused his courage to ooze, and he shot the sphere past the catcher to the press box and Tub came home like a steam roller smoothing out a stretch of asphalt pavement.

When the 15,000 fans awoke from their trance and realized that Tub—Tub Spencer—had scored a run, and the tieing one at that, their cheers shook the foliage in the Back Bay fens.

Tub took his honors modestly. After drinking a few gallons of water, he was able to catch his breath and smile—just a careless-like, "that was easy," smile. Fahrenheit Coombs also smiled, but it was noticeable that his smile was principally teeth.

When Tub took his place behind the bat the rough necks back of first arose and publicly apologized for their ill-chosen remarks, but Tub didn't care.

Just to make the matter binding, Tub uncorked another run in the fifth inning, thing time starting it with a scorching single.

There is no record of the steely glint appearing in Tub's eyes—at least Coombs says he didn't notice it. Silk O'Loughlin thinks he saw it, but at the time believed it to be a ray of sunshine reflected by some high brow's pince-nez.

Little more remains to be told.

Tub rolled home on McConnell's double to Lynn after being sacrificed to second by Wood. That was the winning run, for the Athletics never got another look in. Of course, two more runs were made, but Tub's were enough.

Tub figured largely in the third run. Everything Tub does is done largely. The cloud of dust he stirred up when he slid home with the second tally was so extensive that Coombs was unable to locate the plate for some time, and McConnell scored on a wild pitch.

It is rumored that the New York team held a meeting shortly after their arriving this morning and formulated a request to Manager Lake that Tub be not allowed to play in the game this afternoon, as they are hoping to get back in the first division and fear to go up against such a handicap, which could not be verified.

As stated above, Tub is a real hero. The fans are for Tub, and for him strong. At the close of the game there was a strong sentiment toward picking him up and carrying him about the field, but the fans who were trying to get back in the first division said they took another day.

It is said that Tub reduced thirty pounds yesterday, and that another day of similar work will bring him close to the 200 mark. Tub's batting trophy at 3.125 is safe, but will be a big outpouring of fans in the hope that Tub will get in action again.

HAMILTON IS BEST BATTER IN N. E. LEAGUE

Billy Hamilton, the veteran of the National and New England leagues, continues to hold first place at the head of the New England League hitters, although his average has fallen off slightly from the phenomenal .400 he was batting a week ago. Hamilton made nine hits in the six playing days and is still clouting the ball along at a .374 gait. Burrows of Lowell is the only youngster who was giving Hamilton a race a week ago, also fell off in his slugging and dropped to .337, allowing Foster of Lynn to pass him by a handful of points in the few games he played.

It was a week of falling off among all the leading hitters, indicating that the pitchers are settling into their stride as the season gets warmer. All along the line the batters tumbled from their high position of a week ago, although a few boosted their averages. The first twenty live in batting are:

UNDER THE OLD STRAW HAT

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

ETO CUTLEY, on noticing the remark in this column that there were more ways to lose a race than pulling the heels off the favorite in the last eighth, is moved to reminiscence:

"There are several ways to win, too," says Cutley. "Any little boneheaded boy can whip and slash and spur a horse to the wire in front when he happens to be on the best horse, but to win on a bad horse or a tired horse—that's the time to set. THAT kind of a ride calls for a real horseman or sometimes a burglar.

"Speaking of race riders, mention Snapper Garrison's name. He didn't sit on a horse, I guess. Oh, he was a poor rider. He couldn't think quick or anything. No, he had only had the bulgiest set of legs, a good pair of hands and nerve enough to drive a horse through a knothole in the fence, so he might have been a great rider if he was riding. Too bad about him. With all his faults, and his faillings he was only about two thousand pounds the best boy that ever put his foot into a stirrup in this country. If it had been any more than two thousand pounds I'd have said it.

"One day the Snapper had a mount in a race and the owner, who was a good fellow, but the family plate glass because he thought some other horse entered ought to be out chasing foxes somewhere, or cut up for cat meat.

'Ought to Win With His Mouth Open.'

"He ought to come in with his mouth open,' says the owner to Snapper, 'and I guess he will, but remember, you've got down, socks, shirt and suntout, on this baby and BRING HER HOME.'

"Yessir, says Snapper just like that.

"Well, Snapper certainly made for the rest of those riders the happy life, as they say on the East Side. He was off about six lengths in front when the word came 'Come on' and he threw cloth at the rest of the field for six furlongs, and the only favorite began to look for a nice soft place to die about somewhere. He didn't want to do a thing but lay down and pick his teeth. Well, he did, and it was the center of a mile to go. He was through and the whistle blew when he was turning for home. Snapper knew it just as plain as if the horse had told him.

"Wise old Mr. Garrison hunches his head down under his elbow to see what's coming after him. On the right rail was Major Joe, a leggy bay colt, and Major Worthington was riding. No, he wasn't a regular Major. He was a runny little hop-headed coot. That's why they called him 'Major.' Snapper got one peek and that saw that the stuff was off. This big, leggy colt was jumping like a wild horse, about three yards to the favorite's one.

'Pulled Out to Let Major on Rail.

"Snapper pulled out from the rail and left room for the bay to come up on the inside. The Major saw that hole and drove the bay into it. Just as the bay got in beside Garrison old Snapper looked down on him and grabbed that Major coon with a leg-lock that a safe-cracker couldn't have loosened. And then they had it. The Major hollered and Garrison hollered, and the Major threatened to use his bat and Garrison said if he did he'd surely pull him over the fence and leave him for a hoss funeral. So they came down to the wire, both hanging together in one of the grandest bumping matches ever seen in your life. They were tangled up so close to the wire that they had to keep using him tow all that weight for a quarter of a mile, cut off like a flash and threw his horse under the wire by a nose.

"Then the bay was racing around the lower turn and the Major was easing him down, when, around Snapper stopped his horse and, spinning him around in his tracks, came flying back into the circle. Then, without waiting to weigh or anything else, he rushed up the stairs to the stewards.

"'Gentlemen,' says the Snapper, 'I am very sorry to do it, but I must enter a complaint against the colt that Worthington somehow handles his mount in a race. You know, gentlemen, that I never make a complaint unless I think there is just cause for it, because I never want to see any boy in the game lose his job if I can help it, but I owe it to you, gentlemen, the stewards of this association, to protect you and myself and keep from the sort of riding which nearly beat me out of a winning ride.

'This Worthington Is a Reckless Boy.'

"'This Worthington is a very reckless boy, gentlemen; I may say, the most reckless boy I ever saw ride a horse. He will surely as he continues to ride in these big fields, you are going to see him have an accident and perhaps a death or two. You saw what he did to me from the time I left the stretch to the wire, and if he has a mount in another race in which I have a ride, I shall have to decline the mount. I value my life, and I'm afraid that some other chance like the one he forced on me in this race. Gentlemen, he is the most reckless, foulest rider in the country to-day, and he will kill some one if he isn't stopped before he gets through.'

"When the Major came back with his mount, he started upstairs to tell the stewards about it, but they were ready for him, open his mouth, fined him $200 and set him down for the rest of the week.

"'It's a good boy who knows when to beat the other fellow to it,' said Snapper, 'I didn't know how to do that at all.'

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

Jerry Travers, the national amateur golf champion, is back again after a long stay across the water. While he made a miserable showing in the championship abroad, he had nothing but praise and admiration for the golfers he met and saw play.

Henry Wilder, the former Harvard golf team captain, is to lead the Massachusetts golfers in a match against the Connecticut team at the Wollaston Golf Club on next Saturday. Roger Horey, who tied with a couple of the best golfers in this district in the Myopia open event on May 30th, will lead the Connecticut team, and after the match is over it is anticipated that the triples tie for the Myopia gold medal will be played off.

Gilbert Nichols, who was the professional at the Woodland Golf Club last season, is with Wilmington this year. From the statistics of golf he is performing at present it would not be at all surprising to see him cop first money in the meeting that starts at Inglewood on next Thursday. Alex Smith of Anderson and Fred McLeod as usual are the favorites for first place, but if "Gil" gets going he is certainly a record breaker.

And the schoolboy golfers are getting ready for their annual championship that opens the first of July. The struggle this year is going to be a good one and much interest is certain in providing the finish. There is Dana Wingate of Exeter, the Schmidt brothers of Worcester, the Lyons of Roxbury Latin, Captain Onimet Hosmer of Belmont High and Frank Newton to be taken into consideration for first honors.

One of the largest as well as most appreciative galleries that ever followed a State championship got out on Oakley's records to see J. G. Thorp and Percival Gilbert fight it out for first honors.

The Albemarle Golf Club in Newton has a golf hole on a grim amateur tournament next Saturday. Prizes are offered to the best scores in the 36 holes medal play process, and as this is the only event on this day for golfers it will attract many. G. Anderson, a former State champion, is a member of this club and holds the record of the course of sixty-six, which is one of the lowest amateur records in the State.

T. R. Fuller, the State champion in 1906, lost his chance to go through the tourney this year by failing to hole a short putt that ordinarily he could kick into the hole. The fact that it meant so much at that stage of the game was sufficient cause for his missing it while the putt was more or

U. S. S. MISSOURI WINS NAVY CHAMP

The U. S. S. Missouri defeated the U. S. S. Vermont by a score of 12 to 4 at the Sullivan Square playgrounds, which determined the championship of the fleet for the season of 1909. Each Navy Yard championship has been decided during the cruising of the ships at the various yards, the holders of these to play for the fleet championship and New Hampshire trophy upon the reassembling of the fleet. The result of the official series at the Boston yard is as follows:

	Played	Won	Lost	Pct.

YALE TACKLES PRINCETON IN FINAL CONTEST

NEW YORK, June 22.—The Yale baseball team is here full of confidence for the game this afternoon with Princeton.

Coach Billy Lush plans to start Merritt in the box, although he was batted hard at Princeton two days ago and was pounded viciously here last Saturday, while Van Vleck had the Ithacans at his mercy.

Phillips has a bad finger, but will probably start the game behind the bat, although Sweeney showed good form in that position last Saturday. Pop" Corey, son of the Steel Trust president, was taken to New York and joined Harvard at Cambridge on Thursday in the spouting game of the two colleges. Van Vleck will probably be pitted against Harvard.

GAMES OFF IN HONOR OF GEORGE DOVEY

NEW YORK, June 22.—By unanimous action of the club owners, all games scheduled for to-day in the National League have been called off on account of the funeral of George B. Dovey, president of the Boston club.

The funeral services in Philadelphia will be attended by all the presidents of the National League clubs, by Acting President Heydler and President Pulliam and by the members of the Boston and Philadelphia clubs.

The board of directors has ordered that flags at the National League grounds shall fly at half staff for the next thirty days out of respect to the memory of Mr. Dovey.

Dates for playing off two of to-day's postponed games have already been set. Brooklyn and Philadelphia will play a double-header on next Monday, and Cincinnati and Chicago will meet in two games on Friday.

MANY PLAYERS AND MAGNATES AT DOVEY FUNERAL

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—The body of George B. Dovey, president of the Boston National League baseball club, who died suddenly on a railroad train near Xenia, O., last Saturday morning, will be interred here to-day.

The body was accompanied here by John C. Dovey, business manager of the club, and other relatives and friends, and it was taken to an undertaking establishment, where the funeral will take place at 2 o'clock, with burial at Mt. Moriah Cemetery.

Those who came here with the body were Mr. and Mrs. John C. Dovey of Boston, brother and sister-in-law; John Mayo of Cedar City, Utah; Jesse H. Dovey of Latrobe, Pa., and John Dovey, a cousin, also of Latrobe.

The Boston players arrived here this morning from St. Louis to attend the funeral.

All of the clubs in the National League have sent floral offerings.

FIRE FIGHTERS TO PLAY BALL HERE

SPRINGFIELD, June 22.—The Boston firemen have accepted the challenge of the Springfield firemen to a game of baseball to be played in Boston to-morrow afternoon. The make-up of the Springfield team will be as follows:

Fireman Robert J. Stiller, Engine 1, left field; Captain Henry J. Doss, Engine 1, second base; Fireman Charles J. Smith, Engine 8, third base; Lieutenant Noah Bacon, Truck 2, short stop; Lieutenant Moore, Truck 6, pitcher; Louis Graft, Hose 1, catcher; Fireman Andrew Carmichael B, centre field; Lieutenant Richard Hickey, Engine 1, right field; Edward Dawson, Truck 8, substitute.

BIG PRO SPORT CARD TO BE HELD JULY 5

The first big set of professional track games comes July 5, when the County Galway Club of Boston holds its field day at the Boston National's ball grounds at the South End. All the crack athletes on the program will enter the sports and some grand performances are on tap. Matt Sullivan, the star mile runner and athletic coach, is conducting the track end of the program, and has named the events as follows: 100-yard dash, handicap; 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, mile run, three-mile run and high jump. Entries should be made at No. 901 Tremont street, Boston.

There will be a Gaelic football game, hurling match and Irish dancing.

HARVARD CREW HARD AT WORK FOR BIG RACE

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, RED TOP, Ct., June 22.—The Harvard oarsmen began their second weeks' work on the Thames with a vim. Work during the day proved to be the hottest the crews have had since their arrival, but the conditions on the river for evening rowing were ideal. There was just enough of a breeze blowing to refresh the men without disturbing the surface of the water.

The varsity had a good, long paddle, going down stream about a mile and a half below the navy yard. The crew went down in three stretches and came back in two. Stroke Cutler never varied the stroke once, rowing twenty-eight all the afternoon, until they returned to the float, when he gradually worked it up to forty-two. Rowing twenty-eight the men handled themselves well, kept the boat on a keel, spaced out well and kept the stroke long.

But when the stroke went up to forty-two the men appeared hurried and shortened their stroke, which was very noticeable from the launch. This year's Harvard crew does not go well when the men try to row over forty, for they are too heavy, and get better speed while rowing thirty-six to thirty-eight.

The crew is getting better and better every day in their rearranged order, as well in fact that Bryan Cutler may be looked upon as final stroke for the Yale race.

Paul Withington is filling in very nicely at No. 6. He is one of the most powerful oars in the boat, weighs 183 pounds and is an excellent man to back up stroke on the poor side of the boat.

The freshmen eights paddled down to the navy yard and were then sent over the two-mile course upstream. They started off with a racing start of thirty-six strokes to the minute. The boat started off beautifully, and no splashing was visible. The stroke was dropped to thirty after the boat was well under way, and kept there until the last quarter, when it was raised to thirty-six.

Just before going out a change was made in the 1912 boat, Faxon, the coxswain, being replaced by Voorhees, who has been holding the ropes in the freshman four. Faxon was found to weigh 135 pounds, which is much too heavy for any coxswain. This change will probably be permanent, for it would be ridiculous to carry a coxswain almost as heavy as the bow man in the boat.

TOMMY SULLIVAN TO BOX JOE THOMAS

The final boxing show of the season at the Armory A. C. will take place June 20. For the main bout that evening Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence, who has been making good against all comers in Philadelphia, will face Joe Thomas, the California middleweight.

There will be three six-round bouts in addition. Bobby Tickle of Pawtucket and Max Baker of Boston; Eddie Shevlin of Roxbury and Young Dimond of Worcester; Tom Foley of South Boston and Young McDonough of Manchester will be the contestants.

Notes of the Double-Header

Highlanders to-day.

Oh, you Red Sox! That rise in percentage certainly was a peach.

Only two points behind second place.

The Red Sox will have to keep up the good work, for the Athletics are slated to meet the Senators, and they look easy.

In the first game, Stahl, on his first trip to the plate, ripped off a hot single. After the hit was made Plank got very peevish and upbraided Thomas. He probably thought Thomas had signaled for the wrong kind of a ball.

Plank showed a whole stack of class when he pitched himself out of that hole in the second round of the first game. With the bases full and one run in, owing to a pair of hits and a bad error by Gardner, Plank tightened up and caused Ryan, McConnell and Lord to pop up easy fouls.

Here is a much-used phrase when Thomey steps to the plate. "Thomey hasn't done much in the hit line, but go, watch him run." Bullet Jack certainly is there when it comes to sprinting.

Bill Carrigan's double in the third round of the last game of the series should have been only a single. He sent a line drive to left and the ball took a nasty bound, hitting Hartsel on the arm. It bounded high and Bill got to second.

The Athletics landed on Ryan, who twirled in the opening contest, in the fifth for three hits, one of which went to the fence, but they only scored one run, as there were two down when this hard walloping started. Ira Thomas, with the bases choked, Murphy, who stands in the clean-up position, fanned.

Thomas leaned on one in the fifth inning of the opening game and the ball hit the fence. However, as Thomas resembles a wash lady with dickey pins while in motion, he only got two bases. Lord's two-bagger in the fifth was a great deal shorter bit, but Lord can run rings around Thomas.

After the first game was ended the boys yelled, "We've got the first one, now for Chris!"

Nourse, the Brown College twirler, was on hand ready for duty and warmed up before the game.

The first game certainly was a see-saw affair. Both teams scored one in the second and then the Athletics took the lead by putting a tally over in the fifth. However, the Red Sox came to life in their half of the fifth and put over four runs, which seemed to clinch the game. "Right back at you," said the visitors, and put three runs around the circuit in the sixth. This tied up matters, and then neither team scored until the ninth, when the Red Sox made their grand rally.

Barry, the young college player, who is doing such good work in short for Connie Mack, made a sparkling catch off Niles's near-Texas League in the seventh round of the first game. It was a most difficult catch, as the ball came right over his shoulder.

Hartsel had four put-outs in the first two innings of the second game. They all came in a row, two in the last of the first and two at the start of Boston's half of the second.

In the fourth session of the second game, with Gessler on second, Stahl tried a foxy play—that of bunting past the first baseman when that player is running in for the ball. He bunted, but Gessler made the ball with one hand. He then gave an exhibition of juggling and fooled around with it for a time first, Gessler, for fear Davis would clap the ball to his breast, as he was going to do, stayed on second.

Baker made an awful smash in the fourth game, which was a hummer and which was good for three sacks, but Baker tried to stretch it to a home, but a good relay caught him at the plate.

Davis, at first base for the Athletics, had his first put-out in the second game in the fifth inning. High flies seemed to be the order of the evening in this contest.

The Red Sox made a fine rally in the ninth round of the first bout and slipped over a haymaker that put the decision in their corner.

Lord's single, his steal and a wild pitch, coupled with Speaker's timely single, did the work.

Baseball News and Notes

Ty Cobb's batting eye is dim just now. He's not in the famous .500 class, but wait!

Charley Wagner is styled "second to none" as a shortstop in the American League.

Malarky's fine pitching is keeping the Blues up in the race. He and Imbe Kisinger and Taylor are the Herd's main contingent.

When the Phillies' battery is Moore-Doolin, there is some truth in it.

Harry Niles who wasn't wanted by the Browns and Highlanders, is now up to his neck with the Red Sox and doing helpful work in various capacities.

Manager McGraw admits that he handed "Bugs" Raymond a return in the form instead of Jake Sullivan of Lawrence, who has been making good against all comers in Philadelphia, will face Joe Thomas, the California middleweight.

There will be three six-round bouts in addition. Bobby Tickle of Pawtucket and Max Baker of Boston; Eddie Shevlin of Roxbury and Young Dimond of Worcester; Tom Foley of South Boston and Young McDonough of Manchester will be the contestants.

The Cubs attempted to raise the world's pennant, but just as the flag had reached the top of the pole, the wet pulley broke and it fluttered away back of the bleachers in centre field. Is it a bad omen?

Manager Bill Murray of the Phillies is sending scouts all over New Mexico—Pitchers Geyer of Columbia and Southpaw Lafferty, playing third with the Albuquerque Blues. He wants to trade Corridon and Brown.

This Providence scribe don't seem to like Matty Fitzgerald, but it is noticeable that it is Fitz's trusty bat that breaks up many a game for the Orgas. As long as he does that Duffy will be satisfied.

The Pittsburg club has enlisted the services of Edward Van Sellers, the baseball writer and baseball magnate, to look after the best timber in the Keystone State. Van Sellers, by the way, has been scouting for the Oakland club, has stood Barney Dreyfuss to watch Pitcher Frank Kaufler of the San Francisco team, saying he is the best on the coast.

Just because Harry McIntyre, the Brooklyn pitcher, was absent from the field for three days the Pittsburg scribes came to the conclusion that he had consumption and that he returned to his hotels, but ended by "clean up somebody because of the number 3 room."

They tell a good one on "Bugs" Raymond at a Pittsburg hotel, where the Giants were stopping. It seems that "Bugs" has been cut out of all rich food but ground sirloin and an occasional bowl of Grisly. He strolled into the dining room just as dance, ring from the table, grandly ordered that he be declared a free agent instead of being forced to go to New Orleans, where he had been sold by Murphy.

The umpires used to chase Heine Peitz almost every day for doing the Ty Cobb dream's stunts at the start of the game. The day of the clown in baseball should be past.

George Gibson has been a star receiver for several seasons past, but he's a wonder this year. Good old Gibby was on the job with both hands and feet; also heart.

"Don't give your decision too quickly." From the aphorisms of Jack Sheridan. Respectfully referred to one or two new National League umpires.

The Cardinal staff of pitchers has been augmented by the purchase of three new men, who come well recommended. Dunkle, from Lincoln; Mc-Dermitt, Dunlap, Ill., team; Meister, Mount Pulaski, Harmon, Shreveport—at an outlay of $6,000. They will report to the Cardinals at the opening of next year. Good old Gibby was on the job with both hands and feet; also cranium.

Here's what Hall, St. Paul flinger, did against Louisville and the Colonels' record for the last twelve innings. Allowed three hits. Pitched no-hit game before Louisville, fanned fourteen in succession and fifteen in the game. Made two of St. Paul's runs in the last inning. Batted out a double in the tenth, helping his game.

Jim McAleer, always a leader in taking the present slump of his team much more philosophically than most fans, is not worrying over it. Hoffman out of the lineup his team is too greatly handicapped to be expected to make a great showing, and he is just keeping his players hustling in the hope of winning a few games until the regular team gets back.

Manager McGraw had mixed drastic orders for holding Cobb, pounding and several other sports which it is alleged the Detroit star indulges in when practicing. Hereafter the Giant camp will be a model of good behavior and propriety.

At last Dr. Newton, whose career in major baseball reads something like Artie Latham's, has been consigned to the Highlanders. He took the train for Toronto to pitch for that club.

It looks strange to see Rochester leading the International League. For several years Buffalo has had a walk-away to find out how Rochester stood—was to begin on the bottom and work up to the middle or tail.

Charles Cooper Frame, lately of the world's champion Cubs, became a semi-pro when he signed up with the Milwaukee White Sox of the Chicago Baseball League. "Chick" has been sitting on the bench for Milwaukee for two weeks, but refused to play until the National Commission had passed on a claim he made against Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago National League Club. Comiskey, it is said, had promised Frame a Cub pitcher and signed that to be declared a free agent instead of being forced to go to New Orleans, where he had been sold by Murphy.

NEW CARS IN GLIDDEN AUTO TOUR

By J. C. KERRISON.

Harry W. Knights returned from Chicago Yesterday, where he had been to superintend the timing of the fandango and the Coho trophy contests, which in his opinion proved fully as successful as any international race that has yet been held in this country. Mr. Knights says that both events were hotly contested from start to finish, and so far as real honest competition is concerned he has seen nothing that will surpass either of the events. He considers the method of handling a big race adopted by the Chicago Club as the very best.

The events were handled in a thoroughly businesslike manner, the militia proving equal to the demands as shown by the fact that but five persons were at any time allowed upon the racing course after the last car had been sent away. This policing of the course unquestionably assisted the drivers in making excellent time and interfered not in the slightest degree with the daring dashs down the home stretches. The race was not, it is believed, a money maker, but as the event was held mainly for motoring interests in the West it ranks without precedent of equal.

As the time approached for the start of the A. A. A. touring contest the entries came in faster and a more interesting event than ever is assured. A notable feature is the entry of several new makes of cars and others of cars but little known. This is the recognition by the makers of the fact that a number of makes of cars now well known owe much of their prominence to the Glidden tours of former years.

The complete entry list last Wednesday numbered forty-three, as follows: 3 Maline touring cars, 3 Premier touring cars, 1 Premier runabout, 2 Marmon touring cars, 3 Chalmers-Detroit touring cars, 4 E. M. F. touring cars, 1 Maxwell runabout, 2 Maxwell touring cars, 2 Pierce touring cars, 2 Pierce runabouts, 2 Brush runabouts, 1 Metzgen Simplex miniature touring car, 1 Hupmobile runabout, 1 Jewell touring car, 1 Glide touring car, 1 Rapid truck, 2 Stoddard-Dayton touring cars, 1 McIntyre touring car, 1 Mason touring car, 1 Midland touring car, 1 Thomas, 1 Jewell runabout, 1 Lexington touring car, 2 Stoddard-Dayton "hill" car and 2 Detroit entries yet to be announced.

The merging of the two local motor clubs into one solid, substantial and progressive organization will be very much probable than it is to-day. Both organizations seem to be in a receptive mood, both willing to sacrifice some of their individuality in order to come together and with united ranks and concentrated effort do the very best that is possible for the welfare of the cause of motoring.

While it is true that the Bay State has just held a successful race meet, and has in the Bay State Circuit a record for itself, it is likewise true that, as things now stand, with the local automobilists divided in their affiliations, it is not capable of doing the most effective work as it would be for every one to be pulling for one great and general cause under one head and with club funds in the treasury.

The Bay State call for the meeting to consider this proposition is the most welcome, especially as its proposition seems to be the most equitable lines, asking no more than it is willing to give. The general impression among motorists at large is that the merger will go through.

RESULTS OF BOXING BOUTS

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Young Loughery of Manayunk defeated Johnny Willetts at the West End A. C. in an exciting bout that was stopped in the second round. A dispute arose in this round, when one of Loughery's seconds jumped into the ring, claiming Willetts hit Loughery in the breadway. A crowd of spectators followed the second into the ring, and the police were forced to stop the bout until order was restored. After the excitement had subsided the bout was continued.

Loughery forced the fighting from the tap of the gong, having the best of every round except the third, when Willetts forced the fighting. Both men appeared tired at the end of the fight.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Ben Douglas of Newark defeated Jerry Ryan in a ten-round fight at the Olympic Athletic Club. For the first eight rounds the men appeared evenly matched, but in the two succeeding rounds Douglas had decidedly the better of the mill, landing heavily with his right and scoring repeatedly with left jabs to his opponent's face. Ryan clinched at every opportunity in the last two rounds.

NEW YORK, June 22.—In a bout scheduled to go ten rounds before the Bedford Athletic Club, in Brooklyn, Patsy Kline knocked out Young Delaney in the fifth round.

KING WINS $90,000.

LONDON, June 22.—Thus far this season King Edward has been remarkably successful on the turf. Minoru's victory at Ascot brought that animal's total winnings up to £13,378. The King with six horses has won ten races, bringing him £18,577.

BIG SCHOOL GAME TO-DAY.

The postponed game between Melrose High and Everett High will be played to-day on the Malden High athletic grounds.

FERGUSON TO BATTLE JEANETTE

Heavyweights battle to-night in the ring at the Armory A. A., when that pair of huskies, Sandy Ferguson and Joe Jeanette, who were the recent big attraction over in Paris, when Jeannette, he with the French name but indigo complexion, was awarded the decision over Sandy at the end of twenty rounds, meet again.

Both giants are out to win to-night, Ferguson looking for revenge, while Jeanette still hopes to add to his reputation enough to be considered a fit opponent for Jack Johnson.

Whoever wins the bout to-night must be looked upon as a candidate for the heavyweight honors, as the ranks are pretty well depleted and as the boxer of the white race depends on the result, Ferguson has the job of saving the prestige of the Caucasian boxers from complete annihilation.

Should Sandy fail to make good to-night and not defeat his black foe he will be denounced as he never was before, as the fans don't want to see any more black peril threatening the boxing game. He has the chance of a lifetime to make himself popular by he can topple over the big negro from New York, who has nothing in his favor but brute strength.

The black fighters have always been the kind which Sandy was most willing to meet, as they seem to arouse his scrapping nature to the full extent and he never has been get away.

Ferguson has already received an offer from Los Angeles for a match with Jack Johnson if he can beat Jeanette and that is an extra inducement for him to go after the award, and with that in his mind he will stand up as he never has before.

Another pair of heavyweights meet in the semi-final bout when Walter Willough-by, the wrestler-boxer, faces Andrew Mor-ris of East Boston in an eight-round bout. The unit writer is strong as a bull and may have the boxing talent which will make him a proposition worth consulting in the future. He has been waiting for a good chance to break into the ring game and will be given a pickup of a tough opponent for him in Morris.

The first little fellows meet in the opening bout of eight rounds, as Augie McDougal is an aspiring champion and Young McGregor of Roxbury is also one of the liveliest steppers.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

THE ENGLISHMAN AS A FLIRT

The Lesson of the Ruiz - Vanderbilt Tragedy, Refuting Elinor Glyn's Charges Against American Men

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

We are continually hearing from foreign visitors, particularly our English cousins, that American men are "devoid of romance."

An English woman has bitterly resented the fact, that American men did not attempt to make love to her; and a mature English bridegroom brought his bride over here for the honeymoon "because it was a safe place to enjoy himself; no danger of other younger men seeking to lure his wife away in America."

The most uninteresting man on earth to my taste from a romantic standpoint is an Englishman; but that is a purely personal point of view, and may be an inheritance from my Yankee Hill ancestors. They are men of brains and culture, but evidently unsentimental.

The typical John Bull, endeavoring to flirt, always reminds me of a large Newfoundland dog trying to be frisky.

A great many romantic and foolish women find opportunity for their flirting proclivities here with our American men.

Very recently one such woman ended her career in London by suicide, because the American man who came up to the foreign ideal of manliness by "flirting," tired of her and sought some new affinity.

The great trouble with a man who comes to us for a very short time. Principles and ideals cease to exist for him; and nothing remains but the sensations of the flesh, weakened by self-indulgence, he could not and the amusement of the hour.

All of us who possess "temperament" feel that the web of life must have its woof of romance or the pattern is dull and unattractive; yet unless the fabric is woven and tied by the strong, fine hands of Honor, of what use is it in the House of Life?

The man for whom the woman in London killed herself, in the prime of young womanhood, had a fair and sweet wife; he had social position, great wealth and every opportunity to make the world better for his living in it.

According to English standards (and indeed the standards of nearly all the foreign critics who complain of the lack of romance in American men), it would have marked this man as dull and commonplace had he chosen the role of a loyal husband, a worth-while citizen.

According to foreign standards, this man made himself "interesting to women;" he regarded his marriage vows as mere forms, and he proceeded to play with the pleasing temptation which fate threw in his path—as fate throws it in the path of every man and woman.

Being a man incapable of a real emotion, being a man spoiled by plenty and as faithless to the woman he "flirted" with as to the wife he married.

But, while a wife has the privilege of divorcing such a man and retaining her position in the world and the respect of her friends, the woman who is cast off by such a man has no position and no respect to sustain her.

And so this woman, who had been foolish enough to really care for this worthless man, killed herself.

The attitude of England in the matter is amusing. The man is to be tabooed and ostracised by society. Why? Not because he followed the ideal of English critics, of a manly man, and "flirted," but because he got himself talked about in the public press.

Had the foolish woman, who was supported by him, lived, and had they been seen continually together, no one would have ostracised him; but, because she died, and so made the matter unpleasantly conspicuous, the man is to be avoided.

Many of our American millionaires are endeavoring to live up to foreign ideals of manliness.

It is for our "romantic" women to choose; to "flirt" with the married millionaire, or to be sought by the men with loyal ideas of love and marriage, even if they are not romantic according to foreign standards.

Which seems most attractive?

English society ostracizes only those men who get their misdeeds talked about in the public press.

"The typical John Bull endeavoring to flirt reminds me of a Newfoundland dog trying to be frisky."

The Game of "Pretend"

It Keeps Children—Poor or Rich—Happy While Young

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE other day I passed a parade. There were eight in the procession; the eldest was about six, the youngest not more than three.

I think it was a wedding parade, though there were no gentlemen in the party, the part of the bridegroom being taken by a chubby young person clad scantily in blue gingham.

The bride and bridesmaids were gorgeous to behold. They mostly dispensed with the formality of shoes and stockings, but one and all wore beautiful white tissue paper veils, and the bride carried a pink parasol.

No wedding party ever marched up the aisle of Trinity Church with greater solemnity than did this one.

I was not the only one who watched the pretty comedy, almost every man and woman who passed stopped and gazed with eyes filled with amusement or tenderness, according to the way the scene affected them.

It Is Girls' Eternal Game

It was all play—just babies' play—but, oh! how earnest and in such grave imitation of their elders.

Dear little babies! Some day they will be women in fact, and not in embryo, and the burdens of motherhood and care will fall heavily on their shoulders.

And all through life there will be, perhaps, the same pathetic attempt to "dress up," the same woman's love of finery.

If they had been boys they would have been playing some rough-and-tumble game.

But as it was the little game of "pretend" went peacefully on its way.

It is a wonderful thing, this "pretending" of little girls. From the moment they are old enough to play they take up the game of "pretend"; they are mothers from the cradle to the grave.

Whether playing alone or in groups they are keeping house, caring for their doll babies, playing at being women.

Boys at that age are imaginary outlaws, Indians, circus performers—everything, in fact, but what they will be in after life.

The Game for Children

My little niece Margaret is the born mother-kind. She cuddles her dolls and mothers them to an extent that is enough to bring tears of envy to the eyes of some neglected real babies that I have seen.

I seems wrong that every woman who lives should not know the wonderful tenderness of motherhood.

Those to whom it is not given should strive to make up for its loss by opening their hearts to all children.

Remember, that as pain and suffering are bound to come as they grow older, help them to be happy now.

Those babies whom I watch at play are often cold and hungry in the Winter time, and weakened by the fierceness of the Summer sun. Life holds many handicaps for them. Temptations will come calm and still.

The other day they were blissfully happy in their game of "pretend"; the same they will be of such serious earnest before many years have passed.

Let your babies pretend and encourage them in it. Happiness is childhood's divine right.

A Rosary of Friends

By WINIFRED BLACK

A MAN came to see me yesterday.

A big, broad-shouldered, loud-talking, hand-shaking, primitive sort of man. He pretended that he wanted to see me on business, but what he really came for was to get me to hear him talk about a friend of his. He had heard that his friend was somehow becoming unpopular, and he took a whole day off to happen around and tell people what he considered the truth about his friend.

It wasn't the truth at all. His friend is shifty and deceitful and as little to be depended upon as the tide which is here today at 10 and gone to-morrow before the fateful hour. But somehow the more the man who came to see me talked about his friend the better I liked the man who came to see me.

And if ever I can make a friend of that man I'm going to do it. He isn't clever, he isn't rich, he isn't particularly interesting, nor has he any especial influence or position in the world—but he's a friend, a real friend, and he's worth traveling half around the world to know.

Have you quarrelled with your friend about some trifle?

Forget the trifle and remember the friend. There are so few of them—so few real, disinterested, honest friends.

I wouldn't give one of mine up for all the money and all the influence and all the power in the world.

I have at home a little chain made of beaten silver, and on this chain I string, whenever I make a new friend, a shell, and that friend's name is written on it.

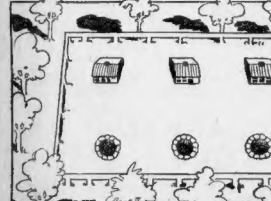
And whenever I get blue and discouraged and begin to wonder what all the fuss is about, anyway, and whether it is worth while I sit down and count my rosary of shells.

There's the woman I haven't seen for years; we were girls together. I don't write her very often, and I never expect to be with her, but I know that wherever she is she loves me.

Next to her on the chain is a boy, rather a disreputable boy, I am afraid, too. But he did his best to knock a man down once because he thought the man was saying something unkind about me—next to the boy is a working girl, ambitious, high-hearted, hopeful—she'd walk half across the country to do me a good turn—next to her is a woman of high degree, who strayed at home from a trip to Europe once to help me do something that I thought ought to be done. Next to the woman of high degree is a ward politician. Not always honest, I am afraid, but, oh, how honest he has been with me!—my friends.

One true friend is worth all the acquaintances. When you find a friend, love him—and keep him.

Can You Lay These Pipes?



EACH of the three householders in this community is entitled to draw water from all three wells. Can you show them how to lay pipes, from either their front or rear doors, so that each house shall have pipes to each of the wells, and without breaking Rule 41144 of the Plumber's Code which says that no pipes must cross?

Exercise as much ingenuity as you like and resort to any possible method so long as you accomplish the feat with no crossing pipes.

CHASE & SANBORN'S HIGH GRADE TEAS & COFFEES

If Paris Lived Today--By Nell Brinkley

No. 13—Would This Brunette Beauty Get the Apple?

"Her eyes and her hair are as black as eyes and hair can be; her face is smooth and strong, and her mouth is the peculiar color of light coral"

THE moonlight lay with a fainting, lime glimmer on the sinuous ripples of Paris's head.

He listened a little minute to the still, quick lap of overturning water on the shell, and the breathing of the sea in its sleep—and then he screwed around and looked up; the moonlight shifted from his hair now to his eyes, making them impious, unearthly.

Just the whitening time to talk about girls. And the setting, too. The enchantment of the moon, and the heavy smell of wet flowers, a little wind talking idly, wistfully up among the tree tops and dallying down in the long grass blades in that matted mystery of grass forest next to the ground, the monotonous rhythm of crushing water, the utter, utter silence of the roofless, lonely outdoors—the silence that is a myriad of repeated, insistent noises that each stand out startlingly, no matter how faint they are, apart from any other sound—and over all this the deep, blue-black sky spiked thick with gold and silver stars opening and shutting their eyes.

Just the time to tell about a pretty girl!

And Paris did, tenderly picking up the drifted petals of a fallen apart rose. He shook them about in the palm of his hand and closed his fingers over them.

"Her eyes and her hair are as black as eyes and hair can be. Her eyes are black, black, black—black as that water, and as terrifying, almost, if you look too long into them. Oh, she is kind—I mean terrifying, just because they are so black and baffling, as black velvet and black water, and the moonless sky is black and baffling, because you can't see into them. They seem so deep, yet you cannot get below their surface.

"Eyes that are kind and grave, and intent and mocking, and tantalizing, and inscrutable, and tragic—and beautiful—very beautiful. Eyes—just such eyes as the Spanish cavalier thrummed his guitar to in the black shadow of the wall on moonlight nights in old Seville—just such eyes as lean out of old romances of Florence and Genoa by the sea-velvet eyes, with silver lace collars curling below them and pearls fitting above them—eyes that were made to lean above floating music on night water—eyes that were made for old rose sleeves and silver-gray velvet and pale amber beads—eyes—well—I must be getting on!

"Her hair is that black, too—lustreless—dusky, as like the Southern midsummer sky as her eyes are—as black as the thick chestnut you crush on your picture. And in it she wore a pale yellow rose like the color of sunshine—two pale golden roses, one above each pale little ear.

"Her face is smooth and strong, the fine building of it showing under the skin at her cheekbones and chin and jaws. Her skin is dark, that grayish dark with not hardly any brown in it.

"Her mouth is the peculiar pallid color of a light coral; it's full and sweet and a little mocking and a little sad.

"Her body is slight and small and slow-moving—lazily graceful.

"Her hands are silken-backed and tapering and sleek and still.

"I don't know anything, oh, Lady, about her heart! I think she is romantic—the flavor of romance appeals to her sombre eyes and lights a star in them.

"She is kind—but maybe sometimes cruel, too—only to men folks. She could not possibly, for pretty long, wouldn't stick in her mind. She remembers moonlight better and loves music more.

"When she was little her eyes were too big for her face and she talked to herself and understood poetry, and music roused a storm of passion in her dark little face. She had no temper, but only quiet rage that stood still behind her eyes and never came out in words, but paralyzed and charmed everybody that happened to be facing 'em. And the rages wouldn't come maybe once in a year. That's all I know about her heart.

"If only under her eyes are black—black—black. And when I saw her she had one hand, sleek and taper, under her chin, and a yellow rose in her hair, and her eyes like water at night looking out above."

Paris opened his closed fingers and let the rose petals drift down in the moonlight.

What She Says

A MAN who possesses a woman hater is the easiest prey for the maiden with matrimonial intentions.

A girl with a sense of humor always enjoys hearing about what a splendid athlete "he" was at college, and if she is wise she will remember her stories after she is married and wants him to beat the carpet.

Art is something that most people talk about, but only the few elect understand.

TWO farm laborers, Jones and Smith, recently spent a day on a beach.

During the day Jones suggested a dip in the briny, and, on asking Smith if he could swim, that worthy said: "Yes, like a duck." They both entered the water, and Jones immediately struck out and soon left his companion fifteen or twenty yards behind.

On looking around to see if Smith was coming, he was horrified to see him struggling in the water in a drowning condition.

Jones at once made for his friend, and with great difficulty managed to get him to shore.

Restoratives were at once applied, and in a short time Smith regained consciousness, when his companion said to him: "You great fule, you said you could swim like a duck!"

"So I can," said Smith. "But I lost my futhold."

Abe Wasn't Such a Fool

He Had Enough of Wisdom to Learn by Experience

By KENNETT HARRIS

"I SEE Twyford Ames has been burned out, lock, stock an' barl," remarked Abner Dunwoody, looking up from the weekly paper.

"I was out to his place last week," he continued. "Perry Westerman, the insurance agent from Bentover, was there tryin' to get the old man to take out a policy on the house an' barn, but he might as well have talked to a tub o' butter as to that crazy coot."

"He'd ought to be sorry now," said Baker. "A fellow ain't got no sense takin' chances on fire. I got $500 on my face, so any time I'm burned out I'll have something to start me buildin' again."

"Don't you waste no tears wastin' for Twyford," advised Washington Hancock. "He may slip up onct in a while, but he can pound sand into a rat hole without havin' the directions printed on the hammer handle. Twyford's a heap like a feller I used to know in Nodaway County —Abe Lemmer. There was lots o' folks that carried all the insurance they could stagger under that called Abe a fool.

The One Place He Was Weak.

"But if you started to argyer with Abe on most anythin', the odds was that you'd come out at the little end of the horn. He was the best posted man on the tariff I ever seen and he raised the best crops of anybody around. Where the neighbors allowed he was right weak was the way he trusted everybody.

"Abe would lend a man fifty dollars on his note 'thout any security. He let me take his best gal buggy ridin' onct, an' she was a mighty good lookin' gal, too. He had an idee that folks aimed to do right if they was treated right an' trusted, an' it certainly was surprisin' how little he got skinned. everythin' considered.

Abe in a Cow Trade

"'What'll you take off that there cow?' says Abe.

"'Fifty dollars spot cash, an' not one single solitary cent less,' says the feller. That there cow'll give six gallons o' milk a day an' she's the best dispositioned critter you ever seen an' only plain' four.'

"'If you'll give me your word that's all so, an' she's worth that much money, I'll give you fifty dollars,' says Abe.

"'Well,' says the feller, 'she'll give from three to four gallons anyway, an' as long as she don't get excited she'll behave tol'able well. She cain't be much over six year old, an' she's worth thirty dollars of any man's money.'

"'That's about the way it would go,' "Yes, it would," answered Baker. "I think I see a feller talkin' that way about a cow he wanted to sell."

"That's about the way it worked with Abe, anyway," said Hancock. "But what made folks sure Abe was a fool more'n anythin' else was that he never locked up his house or barn nights. They told Abe he'd be cleaned out some night, but Abe just laughed.

Sure Enough, He Got Robbed

"Finerly a gang swooped down on him sure enough. He didn't make much of a holler, not hein' that kind, an' he didn't waste no time followin' his lost horses into Kansas. What he done was to go down to the village an' buy half a dozen of the biggest padlocks, with heaps a quarter of an inch thick an' as long as your arm, an' when the neighbors come around to say 'What did I tell ye?' Abe was fixin' 'em on to the barn door."

"Lookin' the stable door after the horse was stole," grinned the storekeeper.

"Certainly," agreed Hancock. "That's what they all done said."

"That's all right, fellers,' says Abe, 'but if you'll look inside there you'll see there's a top buggy an' two sets o' work harness, besides the grain not an' the hay in the mow that wasn't took. The horses is gone, but I've got them things left. I may be a fool but I ain't such a big one that I cain't learn by experience.'

"That's the way with Twyford Ames," said Hancock. "He came into town yesterday an' got insured the first thing he done."

"But he was burned clear out," said Dunwood, "an' he hain't rebuilt yet."

"Hail insurance, sech as drewed Hancock. "His crop's still a-standing."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT BOUND IN MY WILL.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

As you have been of great assistance to me, a friend of mine has asked me to write to you in her stead. The girl is a widow just past her twenty-first birthday, although everyone considers her quite a girl in every way and very popular with men, both has any amount of friends, both sexes. For the past year and a half she has encouraged the attentions of a certain gentleman whom she liked better than the rest, but at the same time kept on good terms with others.

This gentleman has declared his love time and time again, but still has never asked her to marry. At the same time he demanded that her future if we may live comfortably afterward. We will, therefore, not be able to get married for about two and a half years to come. I am satisfied to wait that length of time, and I also agreed to help my fiance in building up our future by save as much money as I could. To this my mother does not consent. She says "A man must work himself up." She also says that three years is too long to wait. Do you think she is right that she quarrels with me because I am willing to help him save, and do you think that my younger sisters are right in throwing taunts at me that I give him money? He is a very respectable young man and has good habits. As we love each other dearly, I do not think that my relatives should dictate to us, especially as my mother knows that he is a steady man in every respect and as she also knows his family.

A. E.

YOU are right to save your money in order to help, but I think that you should not give it to him but should open an account of your own and save in that way. Your mother is right; he should not take any money from you. If he is steady and industrious he is sure to get on and you must not be discouraged. When your mother sees that he is earnest and that you really care for each other I think that she will give her consent.

HER OWN BANK ACCOUNT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl nineteen years of age and am engaged to a young man two years my senior. For the last six months. This young man is not wealthy, but before we marry he will start in business for himself in order that we may live comfortably afterward. We will, therefore, not be able to get married for about two and a half years to come. Stock Company Play Leads the List Of This Week's Drama

Lindsay Morison's new stock company opened at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday in the delightful four-act rural play, "Home Folks," and both players and show proved a winner with those who attended. The story of the play is somewhat different from the usual run of rural dramas, inasmuch as there are no heavy "villuns" seeking to have the "p-a-apers" signed and no distressed heroines tearing around seeking sympathy and aid from the hero. Instead there is a lot of good, clean comedy, with a great many funny situations, and these appealed to the audience immensely.

The scenes are laid in Illinois after the Civil War, and tell the story of a young girl, Ruth Clayton, who goes to the farm of Widow Selby and makes her home with the widow and her son, John. She has learned that her brother, Walter, has joined a band of horse thieves and is now in the bottom lands near the Selby farm. The four acts are taken up with the flight of Walter, and the final clearing of the suspicions against John and the capturing of the horse thieves.

There are a great many surprises which prove delightful. There are scenes where the boys who go in swimming lose their clothes and come home dressed in barrels; there is the picnic on the river, the butter churning scene and several others, all of which prove effective.

There are a great many Boston favorites in the cast. Howard Hansel gives a fine, easy-going impersonation of the hero, John Selby. Miss Edna Bruns, as the Ruth Clayton, is one of the ablest and most charming of leading ladies, while favorite Mary Sanders, as Bert Hopkins, the mischievous little chap, is everything to be desired. Rose Morison as the Widow Selby is as clever in her act as ever seen, while William Hasson, Walter Walker and James Devine, together with the "kids" who do all kinds of stunts, make things interesting.

Keith's

The heat had no terrors yesterday for the crowds which went to two performances in Keith's Theatre. This week's vaudeville bill is excellent as a midseason attraction and was thoroughly well appreciated. Ralph C. Herz, recently chief comedian of "The Soul Kiss," was accorded an unusual flattering reception. "As a private secretary he showed a marvellous insight into human nature, and then, again, as a "has been tragedian," he displayed some wonderfully subtle and deft touches in acting. His sketches, "the old dandy" and "the lawyer," were also very realistic and laugh-provoking.

Augusta Glose, in a long repertory, made a great hit. Eva Taylor and her company in "Chums" are really one of the best parts of the splendid bill. The farce comedy gives this talented actress the very scope she needs to display her great ability. Tacernoff and his troupe of performing ponies and dogs present an animal act that is well worth while. The Millman trio in their slack wire performances and all the other acts are in thorough keeping with the high grade of the entire bill.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Yankee Mandarin" is gaining in favor at every performance, judging from the size of the audience at the Majestic Theatre last evening, when this song show by Reginald de Koven and Edward Paulton began another week of its run there. It is one of the best musical productions for hot weather entertainment yet offered in this city. Ada Lewis has scored a marked success in her role, and dainty Irene Dillon is one of the most captivating ingenues on the stage. It is a strong cast.

Park Theatre.

"The Traveling Salesman" at the Park Theatre is well into its third month here and quite as popular with the public as during the first week, when it stamped itself upon the public mind as a comedy which has few peers as a laugh-producer. It is quite out of the ordinary, and for all-around interest, to say nothing of its inherent humor, has a place in the success field all to itself. Mark Smith, Austin Webb, James O'Neil, Jr., are among the most prominent of the men in the cast.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Broken Idol" is on its fourth week at the Tremont Theatre, with Otis Harlan leading the cast and all the other favorites in his support. The "second edition" was given last night and proved as acceptable as the first. This means there were many changes in the music and specialties, so that those who had seen the piece before found it equally enjoyable upon repetition. A new song which pleased greatly was "In Old Mexico." Trixie Jennery's dancing was also a new feature.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is the present bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre and was given a very adequate performance there yesterday by the stock company. Mr. Van Rensselaer played the dual leading role and Sadie Hilton was the Agnes Carew of the drama. The whole company was acceptable and the play is well staged.

Globe Theatre.

Rich and Walters in "Down on the Farm" are at the Globe Theatre this week, and others in the list of entertainers are Warren and Malloy, dancing and piano playing novelty; Pete Griffin, dancer; Frank Hurley, Jack Clahane and Miss Mann. The pictures are new. They will be changed Thursday.

Castle Square.

The Castle Square stock company this week is singing the old favorite, "Florodora," the tuneful musical comedy that has made itself famous in Europe and this country. Mr. Craig has staged his revival splendidly. Last night it was given a hearty greeting at the Castle Square by a large audience.

Mr. Carleton as Abercoed and Miss Le Baron as Dolores gave a magnificent account of themselves and were accorded a splendid reception. The chorus was unusually well chosen and showed that the rehearsals had been painstaking and thorough. Miss Young made a fine Lady Holyrood. Mr. Meek as Tweedlepunch made the most of the humorous part. Wilfred Young as Captain Arthur Donegal, Gertrude Binley as Angela Gilfain and Bert Young as Leandro were thoroughly competent.

Scenic Temple.

Ed Blondell and a well selected company are this week producing the catchy farce, "The Lost Boy," at the Scenic Theatre, Revere Beach. Last night a big crowd was present and the laugh started with the raising of the curtain and continued until it fell at the close of the performance. There are several other acts which pleased everyone.

New Palace.

The entertainment this week at the New Palace Theatre is unusually fine. Illustrated songs and moving pictures are on the bill in great numbers and variety. The vaudeville part of the performance, too, is very fine. Emily Nice does some clever work as a character change comedienne. Les Valandone are clever as wire cyclists. The rest of the bill is strong.

Hub Theatre

The big feature at the Hub Theatre is Professor Neuman, "the world's greatest mind reader and magician and illusionist." Fred Murray adds greatly to the bill with his songs and sketches, while Miller and Russell presenting the pleasing sketch, "The Lunatic and the Man," looks a big winner. The whole vaudeville program is of equal quality to that presented in the highest priced theatres.

Austin and Stone's Museum.

Bigney, the man fish and high diver, divided honors yesterday at Austin & Stone's museum with John Y. Smith and Tom White, two mighty men of muscle who did great stunts with the dumbbells. Bigney is the man who has attained world wide fame through his diving feats from some of the highest bridges in America and yesterday at the museum he gave a thrilling and novel exhibition of his skill in a huge crystal tank.

Smith and White, the strong boys, are both Bostonians, and big crowds of admirers were on hand to see them do some heavy weight lifting. John Vilendi has a pleasing musical program, and the Manhattan Girls sprung a rattling good minstrel show with Dan Malumby as interlocutor, Tom Bullock and Billy Hall as ends, and Ida Campbell, Cassie French, Annie Ross, Gladys Gray and Clara Steel in the circle. In the vaudeville show were Allen, dancing specialist, the Dalys, versatile Tom Bullock, Ferguson and Madison, the comedy boxers, and a lot of new motion pictures.

Deep-Sea Fishing.

While the city folks are feeling the effects of the hot days, the patrons of the steamer King Philip are enjoying the cool breezes and catching cod and haddock in large numbers. Every comfort and convenience is aboard and the ladies, of which there are many, are well taken care of by the matron. The competition for the record of the largest fish is an added attraction and the amount is increased to $400 this season. The boat leaves Commercial Wharf every day at 10 o'clock and the return trip lands passengers at 5:45 p. m. in time for all trains.

Norumbega Park.

The crowds are going to Norumbega Park again in the good old-fashioned way, as far as numbers are concerned. The new theatre, which started on its second week yesterday, is perfectly equipped in every detail for seating patrons in comfort and for an adequate presentation of high-class vaudeville.

Boston's favorite 'cellist, Ralph Smalley, is a great card this week. The Azard brothers do a remarkable act as equilibrists. The famous Bicknells contribute their whirlwind dances, concluding their performance with the much-discussed Apache dance. The zoological garden, deer park, restaurant overlooking the river, electric fountain, casino, canoeing and boating, and, best of all, the picturesque park itself, combine to make Norumbega Park an ideal spot for Summer amusement and recreation.

Popular Bass Point.

There is no more charming spot on the Massachusetts coast at which to enjoy a day's outing by the sea than Bass Point, Nahant. The natural beauty of this resort is well known. There is no more picturesque blending of country and seashore scenery to be found anywhere on the New England coast. The steamers Gov. Andrew and Gen'l. Lincoln leave Otis wharf at frequent intervals during the day and evening.

Paragon Park.

Hot weather makes Paragon Park an ideal place at which to spend a warm afternoon or evening, and a multitude of pleasure seekers showed their appreciation of the fact yesterday. There were concerts by the Russian Operatic and the Afro-American band and other musical organizations. The Paragon Opera Company has made a hit. A half-hour version of "Pinafore" is worth seeing. There are many other attractions.

Norumbega Park.

There is a fine show at the Norumbega Park Theatre this week, not to mention the Zoo, the river and a host of other attractions. Among the stage performers now there are Ralph Smalley, Symphony Orchestra cellist; the Bicknells, whirlwind dancers; Hill, Cherry and Hill, in a comedy bicycle act, and Johnny Hoey and Jeannette Mozar, in comedy, songs and dances.

Luna Park.

Luna Park, the new amusement resort in the heart of Revere Beach, has already gained great favor. There are many things there which will appeal to amusement seekers. The Norins do some sensational high diving, there is fun to be had with the wireless telephone, "Love's Tangle," the airship and the laughing grotto. The grounds are cool and shady. There will be a swimming contest on Friday evening.

CLEARS THE COMPLEXION OVERNIGHT

Pimples, Rash, Eruptions, Etc., Quickly Eradicated by New Skin Remedy.

Ever since its discovery, poslam, the new skin remedy, has, in its extraordinary accomplishments, exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the eminent specialist who gave it to the world. It has cured thousands of cases of eczema and eradicated facial and other disfigurements of years' standing. The terrible itching attending eczema is stopped with the first application, giving proof of its curative properties at the very outset.

In less serious skin affections, such as pimples, rash, herpes, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, etc. results show after an overnight application, only a small quantity being required to effect a cure. Those who use poslam for these minor skin troubles should immediately secure one of the special 50-cent packages recently adopted to meet such needs. Both the 50-cent package and the regular $2 jar may be obtained in Boston at all Riker-Jaynes drug stores, Houghton & Dutton's drug dept., and other leading drug stores.

Samples for experimental purposes may be had free of charge by writing direct to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth Street, New York City.

THE MOTOR BOAT

By James J. Montague

I LAUNCHED my brand new motor boat upon the tossing tide,
And when it gaily sped away I thrilled with joyous pride;
Then something chugged inside of it; it breathed a direful snort,
Wheezed once or twice, gasped hard for breath, then stopped extremely short.
And so, attempting to appear as if I little cared,
I towed it toward a 'longshore sign that told me "Boats Repaired."

A MAN came down and viewed my boat. He said: "She lacks control;
Just let me haul the critter out; she needs a new half sole."
He squatted on a leather bench and overhauled my boat.
Then lightering ten bones off me, he got the craft afloat.
She started, moved and seemed to feel a thrill of life, and then
The engine chortled raucously and knocked off work again.

I TOWED her to another shop; a low built man came down
And cast upon my little bark a disapproving frown.
Quoth he: "You ought to flush her out to find her real weak points;

I'll have to send my boy for lead, so's I can wipe her joints."
The boy returned, the joints were wiped, we briskly moved off shore.
Then "clank," the weary engine said, and sank to rest once more.

ANOTHER boat repairer came. He said: "She interferes;
With leathers on her off hind hock she'd ought to run for years.
But so's to make a job of it, and have her good an' sound,
Ithink I'd better pull her out and shoe her all around."
The boat was shod. Once more she fled across the dimpling bay,
And then the motor reared aloft and calmly sailed away.

I KNOW that cobblers sometimes fail, that plumbers meet distress,
And blacksmiths who have little skill are doomed to unsuccess.
I used to wonder what they did in order to evade,
The pangs of sheer starvation when they laid aside their trade.
But their close guarded secret is at last completely bared:
You'll find them, if you seek them, at the sign of "Boats Repaired!"

THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW ROOM

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

All Paris was wildly excited over the great mystery of the tragedy of "The Yellow Room," in which an attempt was made to assassinate the beautiful and gifted Mlle. Stangerson.

The facts of the mystery were these:

At the Chateau du Glandier, on the border of the forest of Sainte-Genevieve, above Epinay-sur-Orge, lived Professor Stangerson and his daughter. She and her father were doing there the first scientific work in radiography.

On the night of the tragedy Mlle. Stangerson worked with her father till midnight and then retired to the "Yellow Room." Her father and Daddy Jacques heard her lock the door of the "Yellow Room" and bolt it from the inside. At 12:30 o'clock, while Jacques and Monsieur Stangerson were in the laboratory, there were sounds of a terrific struggle in the "Yellow Room" and Mlle. Stangerson was heard crying, "Murder! Help!"

Immeditely afterwards revolver shots rang out, and the sounds of the struggle continued for some time; then all was silence.

Joseph Rouletabille, sent by the Epoque, a Paris newspaper, to solve the mystery, learns that when the Yellow Room was broken open Mlle. Stangerson was found there alone, bleeding from a wound in the temple, made by a blow with a large mutton bone, which lay on the floor.

The window blind was still fastened on the inside, and how her assailant escaped was the greatest mystery.

Rouletabille is aided in his task by a lawyer friend named Sinclair, and by the young woman's fiance, Robert Darzac.

On recovering consciousness Mlle. Stangerson tells of the attack, saying she did not see her assailant clearly enough to describe him, and that she fired two shots at him.

Discussing how and when the assassin entered the Yellow Room, Rouletabille questions whether he might not have had as an accomplice a chambermaid who cleaned the pavilion a short time before, in the absence of the Professor and his daughter. Darzac assures him the chambermaid is honest and devoted.

Rouletabille fits a paper pattern, taken from a huge footprint in the Yellow Room, to a footprint in the soft earth outside, finding it matches exactly. He then leads the way to a small lake at some distance, and shows that the assassin there changed his big hobnailed boots for small, well made shoes, and departed, trundling a bicycle beside him.

Frederic Larsan, a noted Paris detective, who is also examining marks near the lake, agrees with Rouletabille's conclusion, but says he is waiting for the Chief of the Surete to arrive before making any statement to the magistrate.

Rouletabille and Sinclair go to the Donjon Inn, near the chateau, for breakfast. The surly innkeeper is brought to terms immediately when Rouletabille says to him slowly: "We shall have to eat red meat—now," and at once brings supplies.

After telling a woman who helps him not to let him see "The Green Man" if he comes, the innkeeper stands gazing out the window and soon exclaims: "Ah, there he is!" as a man dressed in green comes leisurely in sight, walking along the road toward the inn.

"We Shall Have to Eat Red Meat."

HE wore eyeglasses and appeared to be about five and forty years of age. His hair as well as his mustache was salt gray. He was remarkably handsome. As he passed near the inn, he hesitated, as if asking himself whether or no he should enter it; gave a glance toward us, took a few whiffs at his pipe, and then resumed his walk at the same nonchalant pace.

Rouletabille and I looked at our host. His flashing eyes, his clenched hands, his trembling lips, told us of the tumultuous feelings by which he was being agitated.

"He has done well not to come in here to-day!" he hissed.

A Keeper from the Glandier.

"Who is that man?" asked Rouletabille, returning to his omelette.

"The Green Man," growled the innkeeper. "Don't you know him? Then all the better for you. He is not an acquaintance to make. Well, he is Monsieur Stangerson's forest-keeper."

"You don't appear to like him very much?" asked the reporter, pouring his omelette into the frying pan.

"Nobody likes him, Monsieur. He's an upstart who must once have had a fortune of his own, and he forgives nobody because, in order to live, he has been compelled to become a servant.

"A keeper is as much a servant as any other, isn't he? Upon my word, one would say that he is the master of the Glandier, and that all the land and woods belong to him. He'll not let a poor creature eat a morsel of bread on the grass—his grass!"

"Does he often come here?"

"Too often. But I've made him understand that his fact doesn't please me, and for a month past he hasn't been here. The Donjon Inn has never existed for him!—he hasn't had time!—been too much engaged in paying court to the landlady of the Three Lillies at Saint Michel.

"A bad fellow! There isn't an honest man who can bear him. Why, the concierges of the chateau would turn their eyes away from a picture of him!"

"The concierges of the chateau are honest people, then?"

"Yes, they are, as true as my name's Mathieu, monsieur. I believe them to be honest."

"Yet they've been arrested?"

"What does that prove? But I don't want to mix myself up in other people's affairs."

"And what do you think of the murder?"

"Of the murder of poor Mademoiselle Stangerson? A good girl, much loved everywhere in the country. That's what I think of it—and many things besides; but that's nobody's business."

"Not even mine?" insisted Rouletabille.

The innkeeper looked at him sideways and said gruffly:

"Not even yours."

The omelette ready, we sat down at table and were silently eating, when the door was pushed open and an old woman, dressed in rags, leaning on a stick, her head doddering, her white hair hanging loosely over her wrinkled forehead, appeared on the threshold.

"Ah! there you are, Mother Angenoux! It's long since we saw you last," said our host.

"I have been very ill, very nearly dying," said the old woman. "If ever you should have any scraps for the Bete du Bon Dieu"——

And she entered, followed by a cat, larger than any I had ever believed could exist. The beast looked at us and gave so hopeless a miau that I shuddered. I had never heard so lugubrious a cry.

As if drawn by the cat's cry, a man followed the old woman in. It was the Green Man. He saluted by raising his hand to his cap and seated himself at a table near to ours.

"How is Mme. Mathieu?"

"Quite well, thank you."

So the young woman with the large, tender eyes, whom we had just seen, was the wife of this homely rustic, whose jealousy seemed to emphasize his physical ugliness.

Slamming the door behind him, the innkeeper left the room. Mother Angenoux was still standing, leaning on her stick, the cat at her feet.

"You've been ill, Mother Angenoux? Is that why we have not seen you for the last week?" asked the Green Man.

"Yes, Monsieur Keeper. I have been able to get up but three times, to go to pray to Sainte Genevieve, our good patroness, and the rest of the time I have been lying in my bed. There was no one to care for me but the Bete d Bon Dieu!"

"Did she not leave you?"

"Neither by day nor by night."

"Are you sure of that?"

"As I am of Paradise."

"Then how was it, Madame Angenoux, that all through the night of the murder nothing but the cry of the Bete du Bon Dieu was heard?"

"As if I Had Heard the Devil"

Mother Angenoux planted herself in front of the forest-keeper and struck the floor with her stick.

"I don't know anything about it," she said. "But shall I tell you something? There are no two cats in the world that cry like that. Well, on the night of the murder I also heard the cry of the Bete du Bon Dieu outside; and yet she was on my knees, and did not mew once, I swear. I crossed myself when I heard that, as if I had heard the devil."

He held out a packet to the old woman, who took it eagerly and went out by the door, closely followed by her cat.

"Then you won't serve me?" asked the Green Man.

Daddy Mathieu's face was placid, and no longer retained its expression of hatred.

"I've nothing for you—nothing for you. Take yourself off."

The Green Man quietly refilled his pipe, lit it, bowed to us, and went out. No sooner was he over the threshold than Daddy Mathieu slammed the door after him, and, turning toward us, with eyes bloodshot, and frothing at the mouth, he hissed to us, shaking his clenched fist at the door he had just shut on the man he evidently hated:

"I don't know who you are who tell me 'We shall have to eat red meat—now;' but if it will interest you to know it—that man is the murderer!"

With which words Daddy Mathieu immediately left us.

Eleanor Ames Weds at Fashionable Country Ceremony

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

North Easton was the mecca for fashionables to-day, as it was there that the that of Miss Susan Ridley Sedgwick, daughter of Arthur D. Sedgwick of New York and Stockbridge, and Dr. Arthur Wharton Swann, son of Mrs. girl, Eleanor Ames, and Alexander Lincoln. Miss Ames is the daughter of the late Oliver Ames of St. Paul, but has spent much of her life in Boston with her relatives and is one of the best liked girls of her exclusive set.

Mr. Lincoln, who is the son of Alexander Lincoln of Brookline, graduated from Harvard in '95. After a year's study in Germany he returned and entered the Harvard Law School, graduating from there in '02.

The wedding took place in the Church of the Unity, North Easton, which was converted into a bower of bloom by the beautiful flowers from the Ames conservatories, than which there are none finer in the country. The Rev. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham performed the ceremony, following which there was a large reception at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ames, at their fine estate nearby.

The bride wore a beautifully modelled gown of cream-white satin, trimmed elaborately with family lace, and a long tulle veil. She was given into the keeping of the groom by her brother, John L. Ames of St. Paul, and had as her attendant Mrs. Francis H. Appleton, Jr., formerly Nathalie Gourlie of New York, for whom Miss Ames was maid of honor at her wedding in New York just a year ago.

Redmond Stevens of Chicago, Harvard '96, was the best man and the ushers were John S. Ames of North Easton, a cousin, who recently married Nancy Filley; Ralph Gray son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gray of Commonwealth avenue, both Harvard '01 men; Francis H. Appleton, Jr., '03, and Charles Hunter Dana.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln will sail for Europe June 26 to spend their honeymoon motoring on the continent. On their return they will reside at No. 265 Beacon street.

* * *

The Joseph Leiters have changed their plans for the Summer and instead of spending the season with Mrs. Leiter's mother at the Pickman cottage at Beverly, will sail for Europe the first of the month.

* * *

Arlo Bates will be a frequenter of Bar Harbor this season. He will arrive late in July and stay the rest of the Summer. A motor trip through France claims him the earlier part of the Summer.

* * *

Mrs. Rockwood Hoar has closed her home in Washington and has been spending a few days in New York on her way to her Summer home in Concord. While in New York she was joined by Mrs. Samuel Hoar who was at Pride's Crossing for the wedding there a week ago of her niece, Helen Thomas, and Sam Warren. They will be in town this week for the Harvard Class Day festivities as young Samuel Hoar is among the graduates and one of the hosts for the exclusive Beck Hall spread.

July 3 is the date set for the arrival of President Taft and his family at Beverly Farms. After a patriotic house warming in the Beverly residence he may have to return to Washington.

* * *

Among the newcovers to Bar Harbor this season will be M. Louden and Mme. Louden of the Netherlands Legation. They are expected for the entire Summer.

* * *

Mrs. George A. Alden, who has been spending part of the Summer at Lenox, has returned to her home in Boston.

* * *

A wedding of wide interest to take place in Stockbridge on July 3d will be that of Miss Susan Ridley Stockbridge, and Dr. Arthur Warton Swan, son of Mrs. Thomas Swan of New York. Both young people are well known among Bostonians who summer in the Berkshires and the wedding will be a large and brilliant affair, three thousand invitations having been issued.

The ceremony will take place in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Stockbridge, which was a gift to the Episcopal society of that town by the bride's maternal grandfather, the late Charles Butler of New York.

Miss Grace Sedgwick will be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Janette Dana, Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the late W. C. Whitney, Dorothy Tuckerman, Katherine Atterbury, Doraine Roosevelt and Elinor Rodman.

* * *

Among Bostonians sailing for Europe from New York to-day are Miss Elizabeth Toppan, Miss Anna Stearns, Mrs. Henry Stearns, J. Murray Howe and Miss Florence Howe.

George P. Hayward of Brookline is to occupy the Hall cottage "A" this season at Easton's Beach, Newport.

Miss Nora Iasigi of Beacon street has been entertaining at Clovercroft in Stockbridge Miss Alice Smith of Philadelphia. Mrs. Oscar Iasigi, also of Beacon street, has had as her guests Mrs. Charles Tuckerman of Bay State road and her brother, Ralph W. Appleton of Ipswich.

Lancaster, Mass., is to claim the Countess von Moltke, the wife of the Danish Minister at Washington. The Count sails for Europe at an early date, when the Countess will return to Lancaster, where she has been visiting her relatives, the Thayers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Logan of Boston have arrived in Lenox and are stopping at the Aspinwall Hotel.

Mr. Kroupensky, Charge d' Affaires of Russia, leaves Washington next Friday members of the Russian Legation for Manchester, Mass. The entire Russian Embassy will pass the Summer there, making Manchester their headquarters.

We Make 16 Cereal Foods So This Advice is Unbiased

We make biscuits, flakes and farina—cereals cooked and uncooked—whatever you want. This is the largest cereal concern in America, and we as gladly supply one kind as another. But three people in four prefer the Foods Shot from Guns.

That's why we advertise Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice. These are the popular foods.

At our New York lunch counter—where all cereals were served, all at one price—three people in four chose these.

There's nothing so unique or enticing. Just think of whole wheat or rice kernels, puffed to eight times their natural size.

Not a coat is broken, not a shape is altered. The result is simply gigantic grains, puffed and crisp and digestible.

Just whole wheat or rice—Nature's premier foods—made four times as porous as bread. The grains fairly melt in the mouth.

Judge how good they must '

10,000 New Homes Daily

Every morning, apparently, some ten thousand new homes enjoy these enticing foods.

Our sale now exceeds a million packages monthly, and is growing by leaps and bounds.

One tells another, and the others tell others. One hears people everywhere discussing these novel foods.

If you don't know them we ask you to try them. You'll discover a new delight.

Buy one package—if from mere curiosity. Serve it and hear what your people say.

Then go back to the old-time foods, or cling to the new—just as your folks desire.

Let the children decide. For they are the ones who have most to gain from digestible, whole-cereal foods.

Done by Steam Explosion

Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are the famous inventions of Prof. A. P. Anderson.

He was seeking a way to break up starch granules so the digestive juices could get to them. And this is the way he invented:

The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

That fierce heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous.

Then the guns are unsealed—the steam explodes, and every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles.

The kernels of grain are expanded eight times, yet the coats are unbroken and the shapes are unaltered. We have mammoth grains which are porous and crisp and digestible.

For June Breakfasts

In hot weather—when one wants to avoid any tax on digestion—these are the ideal foods.

In Summer—when one desires ready-cooked foods—here are breakfasts, luncheons and suppers as dainty as ever were served.

These are whole cereal foods—hearty and satisfying. They are not mere confections. Yet never were cereals served in such delightful form.

Serve them with cream or fruit—or in a bowl of milk. Now—on the verge of hot weather—please learn what they mean to you.

Moved by the SUNDAY AMERICAN'S recital of the pathetic life struggles of John Murphy, the Somerville butcher who went mad from overwork and poverty and killed five of his fellows, and the desperate plight of his invalid widow and three children, many have given assistance.

Mrs. Mary A. Kennyson of No. 403 Massachusetts avenue, sent Mrs. Murphy a receipt for her rent paid for a month.

Mrs. Welch, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, has given assurance to Landlord Leventhal that the rent will be met after the month expires.

Mrs. Mabel M. Leo of No. 53 Kempton street, New Bedford, has offered a home to little Margaret, the fourteen-year-old daughter, who is lame, as a companion for her own children at $2 the week, with board and clothes.

Donor's Name Withheld.

E. A. Wood of No. 226 Pearl street, Brockton, sent $2. An anonymous letter contained $1.

An interesting development in the case was the fact that from those of her own class came the most substantial aid. A poor working girl employed as a maid in a Back Bay family visited Mrs. Murphy Sunday afternoon and gave her $2, one from herself and one from a girl who worked with her. Then she wanted to take Mrs. Murphy and the children down to the beach for an outing—the first Mrs. Murphy would have had since coming to America twenty years ago. Her health and a chronic injury made this impossible.

A man who merely said he was a painter by trade sent her a load of wood and Captain Gilkey, a Grand Army veteran, employed as a watchman in the North Packing and Provision Company's plant, where Murphy worked, sent $2 worth of groceries.

The Overseers of the Poor of the city of Somerville have continued to ignore the case, despite the fact that they have full knowledge that it is a worthy one, and neither Agent Folsom nor any of his assistants have visited the unfortunate family.

James F. Mulvey of Woonsocket, R. I., sent a $5 check to the AMERICAN, saying:

Check for Mrs. Murphy.

"After reading the sad story of this family I send you this check. If ever there were a worthy case surely this is one. Why don't you start a subscription for the victims of this terrible tragedy?"

T. Connor of Melrose, evidently, recently bereaved, as his letter is on deep mourning stationery, writes:

"I enclose $1 for Mrs. Murphy. I read in yesterday's American of her trouble. Your story is a fearful indictment of protectionism, modern capitalism, industrialism.

"I am dear sir, yours truly

"T. CONNOR,

"No. 25 Hurd street, Melrose, Mass."

DOVE TO DEATH BENEATH TRAIN

EAST PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 22.—Diving head first at a rapidly moving electric train on the Warren & Bristol branch of the New Haven road, an unknown man met death by being horribly crushed and mangled. P. B. Donovan, motorman of the train, first saw the stranger when near Fort Hill, and at that time the man was standing beside the track. As the train neared him he leaped on to the track and dived head first at the motor car. His skull was crushed in by the force of the blow. He died before he could be picked up. A medical examiner pronounced death due to suicide and ordered the body held to await a claimant.

FAIL TO SOLVE DEATH MYSTERY

BRISTOL, N. H., June 22.—The manner in which Alexander F. McCarns of Manchester met his death continues to be an enigma to the police, and the authorities are still investigating the case. Seven lumbermen, with whom McCarns had been associating, were taken into custody, but as no evidence could be found against them all were released. The body of McCarns was found on the highway, with scalp wounds, with his watch gone and part of the chain remaining in the vest, leading to the belief that he was attacked and robbed. McCarns was a lumberman about twenty-eight years old.

TODD POSTPONES FIRST AIR FLIGHT

PITTSFIELD, June 22.—A balloon flight planned by Professor David P. Todd, head of the Department of Astronomy in Amherst College, with Mrs. Todd and five Amherst College students, was indefinitely postponed, as Leo Stevens, the pilot engaged, failed to appear with the balloon, the All America.

This was to have been the first of a series of preliminary ascensions Professor Todd is to make before he sails aloft with Stevens for Omaha or St. Louis next August in an effort to signal to Mars.

2 KILLED AS TRAIN PLUNGES INTO DITCH

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 22.—News of the killing of two men and the serious injury of two others employed in the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway construction work at Corbettville was received here.

A supply train became unmanageable and left the rails, plunging into a ditch, where a number of men were at work. Two men were caught beneath the train and crushed to death, while two other laborers were so badly hurt that they may not recover.

KILLED IN FIGHT OVER A WOMAN

WOODSTOCK, Vt., June 22.—Officials for the prosecuting attorney are to-day investigating the killing of Francesco Gammelo by Castelino Pipelono. Pipelono slashed Gammelo to death at Reading, a small town near here, at 11 o'clock last night. They were rivals for the hand of a woman and quarreled. Castelino was arrested almost immediately and placed in jail. A special session of the Grand Jury has been called to indict Castino, so he can be tried at the present term of the Superior Criminal Court.

RIVALS MUST BEAT BOSTON TO WIN WORLD'S RECORD

ONLY FIVE DAYS MORE!

FIVE days more of contest, boys and girls.

Bring in your votes NOW, if you have them. Don't wait until later in the contest.

The last voting coupon will be printed Saturday, June 26, and will be good for that day only.

Subscriptions will be received at the Around the World Department until midnight on that day. All subscriptions postmarked before midnight Saturday will be counted.

FIVE more days remain in the Race Around the World contest. You can almost see the end now. It is near at hand. Now is the time to get in your votes. Use your brains. Plan the precious hours of these few days as a general does his battle campaign.

No matter how many votes you may have had when the last publication of the list was made, you haven't any right to feel secure in the position you held then.

Every boy and girl in the list is working now, if he or she expects to win a prize; and YOU, if you want to win, must work to hold the place you have won or to improve your position.

Closes Midnight Saturday.

There have been several changes in the roll of honor. There will be several more before the list of winners is announced. There are changes every day. Did you cause one of those changes? You can, if you will.

Figuring to-day and Saturday, inclusive, you have five full days—120 hours, each chuck full of opportunities which you can use and use to good advantage in subscription getting. Have you arranged to do this? Remember, the polls will close at midnight Saturday and after that moment no votes, of course, will be accepted.

Subscriptions and votes postmarked before midnight Saturday will, of course, be received. It is up to you to get all that you can get together to the Around the World department at the very earliest opportunity.

The voting coupons will all expire on June 26th—in other words, each voting coupon will have a diminishing time limit. The last vote coupon will be printed on Saturday and will be good for that day only.

Interest now centres on the Race Around the World, but is just as keen among the girls. The four boys who head the list will be the boys who make the trip around the world for the BOSTON AMERICAN. They will represent the New England States in this contest, in which boys from New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, all complete. It will be a race between these cities as well as between the boys from New England.

Every effort is making in the other cities to get boys to break the world's record.

Every effort is being made by these other cities to arrange a schedule that will be faster than any other city can arrange. Each boy that will race against the New England teams will try to beat the lads from this part of the country.

Must Beat New England.

The tremendous push and energy that has been shown by the boys in this contest has led the boys in the other cities to believe that if they will beat the boys from New England, they will win the race and take the world's record back home with them.

Just now, everything possible is being done to make a schedule for the New England boys that nothing but an airship can beat.

So, if you want to be one of the four boys to start around the world representing New England, now is your chance. Get busy now and hustle for votes.

The race among the girls, the four leaders of whom will make a most luxurious tour of Europe, is just as keen. Interest is just as high. Interest it at fever pitch. Since the polls closed last Wednesday, two girls from away in the rear, have held positions among the four leaders, only to drop back again the next day. The same is true of the coveted positions lower down in the roll of honor.

If anything, competition is keener for the lower places among the twenty-nine, both among the boys and the girls, than for the four top-most positions.

Hustle along for your subscriptions, do not hold them back. You have absolutely nothing to gain thereby. It means nothing to you, it certainly does not add to your strength, it certainly does not add to your chances of winning.

Get the subscriptions. Go after them hard. You can get them. Others are getting them. If you do not get them, it is up to you. It is your fault. You can win if you will try.

$106,000 IN REALTY DEAL IN BRIGHTON

J. E. Barlow, the well known operator, has made another big purchase of realty, a tract of land at the corner of Commonwealth avenue, Summit avenue and Allston street, Brighton, consisting of 265,486 square feet, assessed for $106,200, about 40 cents a foot. Albert Geiger, Jr., was the grantor.

Another big sale of property in the Back Bay is that of the estate at No. 874 Beacon street, near Audubon circle, consisting of a four-story swell front brick dwelling house and 2,980 square feet of land, all assessed for $21,500, of which $8,200 is on the land. Charles F. Coburn conveyed to Lucy E. Alfreds.

In the South End the four-story brick house and 1,000 square feet of land at No. 693 Tremont street, between West Newton street and Rutland square, have been sold by Frederick N. Blake to David E. Crawford. The property is taxed on a total valuation of $10,800, of which $4,800 is on the land.

Mary A. Wilson has sold to Joseph J. Howe the four-story swell front brick residence and 1,970 square feet of land at No. 808 Tremont street, near Camden street, South End. It is assessed for a total of $8,500, of which $4,000 is on the land.

In Dorchester Mary L. Butters has sold to Maurice R. Tierney et al. the frame house and 2,996 square feet of land at No. 27 Greenwood street, assessed for a total of $2,000, of which $700 is on the land.

In Brighton a tract of 6,000 square feet of land, assessed for 9 cents a foot, on Brookdale road, near Parsons street, has been sold by Lemuel C. Woodbury to Carolina A. Mergerean.

C. J. CAPEN, NOTED EDUCATOR, RESIGNS

Charles J. Capen of the Latin School, said to be the oldest active pedagogue in the country, has resigned. His resignation has been accepted by the Boston School Board.

Mr. Capen is eighty-six years of age, a graduate of Harvard and has been teaching over sixty years.

One of the best known educators in the East, Mr. Capen, who was familiarly known to thousands of Latin School pupils as "Cudjo," refused the principalship of the Latin School several times, although at the death of Moses Merrill, he succeeded the vacancy for a time.

NARRAGANSETT OWES TEACHERS BACK PAY

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., June 22.—Its legal debt limit reached and its available funds nearly exhausted, with no prospects of receipts from the tax levy of this year before next fall, the town of Narragansett, in which is located the fashionable resort known as the "Pier," is declared to be in serious financial straits, and officials and school teachers are wondering where their vacation money for the Summer is coming from. More than a month's salary is said to be due to public school teachers.

GIRL, 6, DIES FROM BITE OF MOSQUITO

LEWISTON, Me., June 22.—A mosquito bite was the most unusual cause of the death of Reta, the six-year-old daughter of Henry Ward, Jr., of this city. The little girl was bitten a week ago, blood poisoning followed, and the brain was affected.

WOMAN BEATS ROOSEVELT'S RECORD RIDE

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 22.—Former President Roosevelt's record horseback ride of 120 miles in one day, made in company with several army officers, has been beaten by a woman. Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth of Avon, a leader in Washington society and a personal friend of the Roosevelts, was in the saddle from 4 o'clock a. m. until 10 o'clock p. m., excepting during two brief stops for meals, and she covered more than 150 miles in eighteen hours.

To-day congratulations were showered upon her for making a better showing than Mr. Roosevelt. Mrs. Wadsworth, accompanied by Dr. Grayson of Avon, started on her ride from her summer home at Ashantee at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Sixteen horses had been provided in relays along the course they mapped out. They first encircled Conesus Lake twice, returning each time to the summer home. Then they rode to Batavia and back, arriving at Ashantee at 6:10 in the evening.

Mrs. Wadsworth then made a second trip to Batavia and back, completing the trip and the 150 miles at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Wadsworth, a few weeks ago, rode on horseback from Washington to Avon.

FIRE THREATENS TWO SETTLEMENTS

CHATHAM, N. B., June 22.—The little settlements of Bay du Vin and Black River, fifteen miles from here, are still seriously threatened by the forest fires which have been raging in northern New Brunswick for the past week. Thirteen families living in houses near the edge of the fire have removed their household effects to the open fields. A slight rain assisted in temporarily averting danger. Yesterday, however, a high wind fanned the embers into flames again, and to-day the houses of the two hamlets were in great danger.

PLAN BABY SHOW FOR DEDHAM LAWN PARTY

The Catholic Women's Club of Dedham will hold a lawn party next Saturday afternoon and evening at the Boys' Home Field, Auburn street, Dedham. The proceeds will be given to the poor of the town.

The committee in charge have arranged several features, among which will be a baby show for children under two years. The winner will receive a handsome prize. Entries can be made with Miss Annie Flannagan, Milton place.

There will also be sports for boys, a girls' tug of war and a band concert in the evening.

LAMB NEW HEAD OF JOHN HANCOCK CO.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company Roland O. Lamb, formerly vice-president, was elected president, in place of the late Stephen H. Rhoades. Colonel Arnold A. Rand, second vice-president, was elected vice-president; Edwin B. Holmes, formerly third vice-president, was elected second vice-president, and William O. Blaney, formerly fourth vice-president, was elected third vice-president.

WIFE IDENTIFIES VICTIM OF TRAIN

WORCESTER, June 22.—Alexander Sharon of No. 52 Crystal street, aged fifty, was the victim of the railroad accident on the Boston & Albany road near the Webster street bridge. His body was found on the tracks by Edward J. Shea and Samuel J. Daley, after it had been run over by a train. It was taken to the morgue where it was identified.

PIERCE TO RUN AGAIN.

Representative Myron E. Pierce of Ward 11, for two years in the House, announced to-day that he would seek another term.

CORPORATION TAX PLAN IS AGREED UPON

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The corporation tax proposition to be presented to Congress will include, if the President and his Cabinet members have their way:

1. A 2 per cent. tax on the net incomes of corporations. Under Supreme Court decisions net income is all the money left after only the operating expenses have been paid and before any money has been set aside for payment of interest on bonds or for other purposes.

2. Corporations to be exempted whose earnings are $5,000 or less. The President believes this will not be class legislation, as $5,000 of every corporation will be exempted.

3. A limitation on the issuance of bonds to the amount of the capital. This law is in effect now in several States. It is designed to prevent the overbonding of corporations to the detriment of the stockholders.

Tax on State Banks.

4. It is proposed to tax the State and national banks and trust companies, giving the national banks credit for the one-half of 1 per cent. tax now paid on their circulation.

5. No definition will be given of the term "net earnings" when applied to railroad corporations. That feature will be left to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has already defined "maintenance" and other expressions associated with transportation concerns.

It is not likely that there will be any provision in the amendment for a direct tax on the interest on the bonds, as that would in many instances be a double tax on the corporation. Of late years bonds are drawn with a contract specifying that if a State or the government puts a tax on the interest on bonds the corporation shall reimburse stockholders. But the government tax of 2 per cent. will take precedence of the payment of interest on bonds.

Careful About Exemption.

The term "exemption" will be carefully avoided in phrasing up the allowance of $5,000 to all corporations beyond the limit of taxation. Some other word will be used by which corporations will be authorized to set apart $5,000 for certain purposes, after which the tax shall be applicable.

The corporation tax amendment was thrown together at a series of conferences between the President, various Cabinet officers, the Attorney-General and Senators Aldrich and Root.

The AMERICAN is the great Home paper.

STATE'S WAR ON WESTERN UNION BEGINS

Attorney-General Malone is preparing to take action against the Western Union Telegraph Company on charges made by the Highway Commission that the company has failed to furnish returns of its business in accordance with the laws of the State.

Commissioner Sohier stated to-day that the Highway Commission had been considering the matter and had consulted with the Attorney-General relative to proceedings for an explanation of the profits of the company. Secretary Fletcher of the commission said that the commission had been unable to secure data that would satisfactorily show the profits of the company in Massachusetts.

Every year the commission sends to the companies a set of questions regarding the business done within the State. The figures submitted by the companies are published in the reports of the commission.

The Western Union, in failing to answer the questions, has made the excuse that its methods of keeping books did not admit of replies that the questions called for.

The telegraph and telephone companies were placed under the supervision of the highway commission in 1906, and up to this time the commission has been able to obtain only meagre accounts of the business of the telegraph companies within the State.

STRAUS OPERATED ON FOR APPENDICITIS

NEW YORK, June 22.—Oscar S. Straus, ex-Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who was recently appointed American Ambassador to Turkey, is at the home of a relative in this city, recovering from an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Straus had expected to sail for Constantinople last week, but his illness prevented and yesterday the necessary surgical operation was performed by Dr. Brewer. Mr. Straus' physician expects that if his improvement continues he will be able to sail for his post in two or three weeks.

WIFE BARRED FROM THE WITNESS STAND

Mrs. Ida B. Lamrock of Ilingham, who seven years ago lost her American citizenship by marrying Frank H. Lamrock, a subject of King Edward, and that fact brought home to her when she was not allowed to testify in her husband's behalf upon his application for citizenship papers. The ground of the refusal was that she is a subject of the British King. Some time during the next three months Lamrock will be admitted to citizenship and his wife will regain hers.

SCORES IN HUNT FOR RICH FARMER

SHAPLEIGH, Me., June 22.—Although two hundred men have searched a greater part of York County no trace has been found of Charles F. Ham, a prosperous farmer who has been missing for several days. Several posses resumed the hunt to-day for it is believed Ham is wandering half demented in the woods. It is feared he may end his life, as when he left home he carried a butcher knife.

GIVES BOULEVARD TO GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, June 22.—Colonel William D. Sohier, a summer resident of Beverly, came before the meeting of the City Council and offered to pay half the cost of making an ocean boulevard out of Hesperus avenue. He made the condition that the City Council would defray half the cost at a sum not less than $1,000. The proposition was accepted and work will be started immediately.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, June 22.—E. H. Harriman was brutally "killed" in Vienna by a wicked ptomaine to make a bear holiday in Wall Street. His "death" is hailed with joy because even his friends are always sure that when he comes to life a few hours later stocks will advance. The "death" of Harriman was a signal that the short interest is about large enough to squeeze and a sharp rally must be expected to-day or to-morrow. This will be accomplished even though the market does sag a trifle lower later. But this is not a bear market.

$ $ $

The device of killing Harriman has become so familiar that it misleads very few persons. Market movements must be considered as purely manipulative and as proof that the reaction from high prices came none too soon. The list is now down about eight points from the high figures, and from now on declines will meet resistance.

$ $ $

For the moment stocks are in a state where idle rumors may push them in either direction, but it can be said, with knowledge of what is going on, that there are more real deals being prepared for announcement this Autumn than there are rumors of deals afloat. Six distinct plans of monumental importance are to be announced one after the other at the proper time.

$ $ $

Some important news is expected in the near future regarding Erie and Lackawanna. The Lackawanna announcement may be indefinitely stated after to-day's meeting of the directors. Four new men are expected to enter the Erie directorate on Wednesday, one of them being E. H. Gary, of the Steel Corporation. Harriman will have at least one representative among them. Erie, by the way, is now said to be earning at the rate of $3,000,000 in excess of its fixed charges.

$ $ $

Wabash preferred is being purchased by strong interests that talk par for the stock in the bull campaign of next April. They refuse to say what the deal is, but intimate that Lackawanna will have no interest in the stock unless in company with other roads. About the only definite thing in regard to Wabash is that E. H. Harriman is to be made a director.

$ $ $

Another encouraging feature was the steam railways' returns. All the roads reporting for the first week in June show total gross earnings of $6,527,303, a gain of 11.02 per cent. over the corresponding period a year ago. In the case of the Kansas City Southern the result for the fiscal year to end June 30 will show less than 3 per cent. applicable to the common but the period, as a whole, reflects bad times. Current earnings are fast returning to a basis which compares favorably with 1907, when the balance after preferred dividends was equal to more than 5 per cent. on the common. The next quarter should show further marked increases in net and gross. The new bond issue will retire $5,100,000 maturing notes, will cancel the $10,000,000 improvement mortgage, pay off the floating debt and provide money for the improvements necessary to handle the large traffic assured under the Harriman traffic agreement.

$ $ $

Kansas City Southern quotations, like those of the Wabash, suffered more from extrinsic than from intrinsic causes. There has been too large an outside following. Insiders in these shares probably did not part with any stock, but professionalism was alert to the fact that Wabash preferred particularly had been bought by a crowd of speculators who necessarily operate with very narrow margins. Their belief of Lackawanna acquisition was much stronger than their purses. Their conviction is well grounded, but in such cases it is better to buy outright 100 shares than 1,000 shares on credit.

$ $ $

President Taft's proposition to tax the is moving the Reading directors to make a distribution earlier than they had expected to do. Even should there be a compromise in favor of taxing dividends only, it will force earlier declaration of dividends than had been intended, for the big bonuses will be rushed out ahead of the tax.

$ $ $

The rumor of an increased dividend for Steel common which was current last Saturday is more persistent, and there is now reason for saying that something will probably be done in October, if not in July. An increase to 4 per cent. is practically assured for some time in 1909, with the idea of making the common stock a 5 per cent. payer early next year. The declaration by the Youngstown Steel and Tube Company of a $3,000,000 dividend shows that the company earned 60 per cent. on its cash capital in 1908.

$ $ $

In the copper world there are reports of big deals through which Amalgamated Copper is to be rejuvenated. Unofficial reports say that Amalgamated interests have purchased at private sale 44,000 shares of Ray Consolidated stock at $19 a share and 100,000 of Gila at $5. The Ray camp, while still in the prospect stage, is so thoroughly developed that it is no longer a speculation. The prophyry coppers are all strong. Chief among them are the two named, Ray Central, Nevada Consolidated, Giroux, Cumberland-Ely, Utah Consolidated, Ohio, Miami, Inspection and Utah.

$ $ $

The industrial and agricultural situation is improving rapidly. The government crop report to be issued July 8 is expected to show that the money value of this year's products of the farms will exceed all records.

Secretary Coburn of the Kansas Board of Agriculture reports wheat condition averaging 72.3 per cent., which means a yield close to 80,000,000 bushels. Corn condition is 88 per cent., the highest since 1902.

The steel companies are preparing to open new furnaces and mills. The railroads are reporting constantly increasing gross earnings.

$ $ $

The bond houses report evidences of satisfactory buying power in the market, but say that it is difficult to induce the investor to take on additional holdings just now. The discreet buyer of bonds, whose habit it is to reinvest a portion, at least, of his income from security holdings, does not usually wait until the disbursements of such income in the form of interest and dividends are actually made before coming into the market. Upon this fact the investment bankers some weeks ago based their opinion that the middle of June should see the beginning of a more satisfactory demand in anticipation of the July disbursements, which, with the exception of those made in January, are the largest of the year. They are endeavoring now to discover the cause for the investor's waiting attitude.

POSTPONE RENIGER CASE.

The case of John H. Reniger, the mine promoter indicted by the Federal Grand Jury on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud, was to-day put over to the September term of the United States Circuit Court.

THE BOYLSTON & WOODBURY CAFE CO.

Preferred Stock Dividend.

The regular quarterly dividend of 2½% on the preferred stock of this company was declared June 15, 1909, payable July 1, 1909, to all stock of record on that date.

HOWARD C. WOODBURY, Treasurer.

WALL STREET LIST STRONG

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Stocks opened strong in Wall street to-day, due to covering of shorts and the placing of supporting orders in the standard industrial and railroad shares.

Steel preferred, Reading, Union Pacific, Atchison and Steel common were the leaders, with advances ranging from one-half to one point. Southern Pacific held firm around its closing figure of yesterday. Trading was fairly active during the first hour of the session. Copper shares were higher in sympathy with the balance of the market. Leading producers and selling agencies, while maintaining the quoted price of electrolytic copper at 13⅛ cents a pound, are known to be making concessions of one-quarter to three-eighths of a cent a pound from that figure. Wabash preferred was another issue to show heaviness.

American shares advanced an average of half a point in London.

On the New York curb trading was dull, with Larose in demand around its previous high record, 18. Nevada Consolidated was heavy and lost one point. Goldfield Consolidated was steady.

SEA MONSTER SLEW WHALE IN BATTLE

A battle to the death between a mammoth whale and some subterranean monster was witnessed by passengers on the United Fruit steamer Esparta, in from Costa Rica. Off Nantucket lightship Chief Officer Smith, from his position on the bridge, got first sight of the combat. The passengers crowded the rails till the end. The whale's opponent couldn't be seen, but from its struggles it was evident the whale was being attacked from underneath. Suddenly the enormous animal threw himself far out of the water, then sank into the ocean, and around him the water was stained with blood for hundreds of feet.

SUICIDE DUE TO NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

VAN WERT, Ohio, June 22.—Frank M. Campbell, manager of the Philadelphia branch of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company of Pittsburg, shot and killed himself here. Campbell is said to have been suffering from a nervous breakdown. He was on his way West for a rest.

FIRM TONE IN LOCAL MARKET

STATE STREET, June 22.—After yesterday's weak closing, the local stock market displayed a somewhat better tone this forenoon, although trading was of small volume. Sentiment on the floor was optimistic and the belief was general that stocks would do better. Loaning rates this forenoon displayed an extended local short interest in Amalgamated and Sugar common and both of these stocks showed moderate rallies.

The former stiffened to 79 and the latter to 123. Outside of these specialties there was little doing in the list. By this it must not be inferred that there was much activity in the stocks named.

Copper Range and North Butte were about steady. Large blocks of Shannon mining rights changed hands at 10@11 cents, but the stock was inactive. American Telephone was firm at 140½@140⅝. It is learned that over one-half of this company's convertible bonds have been turned in for conversion into stock. U. S. Steel was much stronger up to 65.

The local curb list presented a weak appearance and about every stock showed slight declines. The feature was the break in Bay State Gas to 39 cents, with slight subsequent recovery. Southwestern Development receded to 22 cents. Chino fell back to 8.

TOM LIPTON WILLL CHALLENGE AGAIN

LONDON, June 22.—Sir Thomas Lipton, despite the turning down by the New York Yacht Club of his last challenge for America's cup, ha snot completely abandoned hope. H. Westward, his private secretary, indicated to-day that the rumors that Sir Thomas intends to challenge are intended as feelers to learn whether the New York organization will grant moderate concessions in the matter of the size of a boat.

THOUSANDS AT WONDERLAND

The hot wave has driven thousands to the seashore. Since Saturday there has been record crowds at Wonderland Park. The big rides are in demand these afternoons and evenings.

This week the minstrel show at Wonderland includes the Colored Wonders. Next week the show is to be entirely changed and fourteen beautiful dancing girls added.

Sunday American free tickets went like hot cakes at Wonderland yesterday and to-day, holding the attendance to a high mark and keeping all the shows busy.

Brenck's "Golden Graces" present grand new pictures this week, while the "Prophet and Princess" are drawing increasing crowds.

The Moving Pictures and the Funny Mirrows get their share of the Sunday American coupons, and the big rides, the Scenic Railway, Chutes, Velvet Coaster, Merry-Go-Round, Love's Journey and the Little Railway are doing a land office business.

See the daily American the rest of the week for announcements of the Sunday American free tickets to be published next Sunday.

FREE TICKETS TO LEXINGTON PARK

Yesterday was one of the SUNDAY AMERICAN days at Lexington Park, the great inland resort where the bears come out of their dens in the rocks to beg peanuts from the visitors, and where 168 animals all hop and skip about their big enclosures for the edification of the throngs of visitors. The other SUNDAY AMERICAN day will be Friday.

The theatre is free afternoons, once admission is gained at the gate. The SUNDAY AMERICAN free tickets give admission to the park on Tuesdays and Fridays, afternoon or evening.

A Million Miles a Minute—Not Fast Enough

For Journeys Through This Universe, Real Speed, SOMETHING FAR GREATER WOULD BE NEEDED

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

A scientific gentleman, a little more enthusiastic than scientific perhaps, announces a plan that would make possible actual journeys from one planet to another in our solar system—our little celestial neighborhood. The gentleman even thinks that his idea might result in genuine cosmic voyages from one sun to another.

A speed of a million miles a minute is contemplated by this enthusiastic person. He thinks that with a million miles a minute machine everything would be possible, and men could travel to Mars, our near neighbor, and to the far off stellar regions.

Imaginative daring is a good thing. The impossible thing of to-day's dreamer is the commonplace, everyday happening of day after to-morrow. But we don't believe that the bodies of men will ever travel away from this earth to any other planet or sun. There is only one kind of thought in the universe, only one kind of truth and justice undoubtedly. But there are millions of kinds of bodies, marvellously adapted to different surroundings. Here on our planet we see at the bottom of the ocean curious monsters that burst and die if you bring them to the surface. You see in the Polar regions white bears that couldn't live at the Equator, and on the Equator tribes of monkeys that die in the north. Different kinds of animal life are fitted only to special parts of this planet—the crab crawling on the floor of the ocean couldn't live with the eagle that flies above the mountain.

Man is adapted to THIS PARTICULAR EARTH. He has a flabby, mushy body composed principally of water. Inside of it there is a framework of bones, the skeleton, just strong enough to hold that body up and fight against the law of gravitation. Our lungs are adapted to breathing the thick, moist air of our planet. We couldn't live off of this earth in our material bodies. On some of the great planets the terrific force of gravity would keep us glued to the ground, unable to move. It is doubtful whether there exists on any other of the heavenly bodies just the particular kind of air that we need.

Nothing is impossible to intelligence. It may be that man some day will get as far as our little neighbor, the moon, taking with him his supplies of air and of water.

But we don't think it likely, and it isn't necessary.

But that we shall talk to the other planets, and to solar systems outside of our own, we have every reason to hope and believe. Light, the swift messenger, will carry thought and the truth through millions of miles of space. We shall know what the other planets are doing and thinking. That is all that is necessary.

We human beings are ourselves separate little finite planets, each sailing in his little orbit, each separate and distinct from all the others.

When we are babies, new born, we are unable to talk to one another, or to know one another's thoughts, just as this baby planet of ours has so far been unable to talk to or know the thought of the grown-up worlds and suns.

But we human beings never can get into each other's brains, and we don't need to get into each other's brains. We know what is going on in the other brain, and that is all we ask.

In the same way we shall not travel bodily into the other planets. We shall keep our distance, but we shall know what they are doing and thinking, and we shall learn from them, and that alone is important.

Even if men were to travel to the far off stars and distant families of planets, our scientific gentleman would have to improve on his slow-going machine that travels only a million miles a minute. That would be far too slow for the big journeys in cosmic travel.

The light which you see in the sun, or in a railway lantern down the street, travels at the rate of one hundred and seventy-five thousand miles per second.

That is at the rate of ten million, five hundred thousand miles a minute.

And yet there are suns so distant that their light has never yet reached our earth.

Think of that for distance. We know absolutely that this earth has existed for tens of millions of years, yet light travelling toward our world at the rate of ten million, five hundred thousand miles per minute has not yet reached us in all those millions of years.

The inventor's million miles per minute machine would do fairly well for "little journeys" to near neighbors in space.

It would take us to Mars at its closest, in about forty minutes, but it wouldn't be valuable for long journeys.

However, thought travels a million times faster than light itself; the records of science and the speed of thought make all things possible, AND MAKE LIFE REALLY WORTH WHILE.

Talking Birds Are Not Good Flyers

The city of Dayton, the State of Ohio and the United States of America are all eager to applaud and bemedal the Wright brothers to-day.

But why do these representative American inventors, whose spirit of daring, adventure and innovation is supposed to be of the very genius of this country, find it necessary to go to Europe to do most of their work?

Why do they find at home only orations and applause?

There are diverse lands in the earth. Some of them are specially good to work in—and others to talk in.

It has been supposed that America is the land of deeds, and that the countries of Continental Europe are lands of words.

How shall we explain the reversal of these terms in the case of the Wright brothers? How shall we explain the conspicuous failure of American capital to give any kind of adequate support to the creative minds that are spending themselves on the world-absorbing problems of aerial navigation?

It is said that Mr. Wilbur Wright once dodged an after-dinner speech with the telling remark that "the parrot is the only bird that talks—and he is not a good flyer."

There is no doubt about our still having the inventors in America.

The question is, what has become of the bold and FARSEEING BUSINESS ENTERPRISE that was once so eager to seize upon GREAT IDEAS and work them into the concrete?

Suicides —AND ON— Rascality

THE centres of population today are full of people that are discouraged. A great many are so tired of life that they are making an end of it, and a great many more consent to go on living because they have not the physical courage to do the fatal act.

It is said that never have suicides been so frequent since the early days of the Roman Empire. We are much less shocked to-day by a reported suicide than was the case forty years ago.

Of a company of thirty women recently gathered in a social way in a neighboring city, only one was decidedly of the conviction that it is wicked to take one's own life.

The sentiment that seems so widely prevalent that life is scarcely worth living is a serious symptom of moral decay, or at any rate diminished personal vitality.

An Unselfish Man Will Not Kill Himself

A man who is intensely unselfish will never try to kill himself.

The victim of suicidal tendencies will be the one who confines himself within his own shell and finds nothing there to interest him; will be the one who, if he does get beyond his own circumference, lives only in the routine of deeds monotonously done, with no realm of love, sympathy and effort outside of the small chores that he does to-day and that are only the repetition of those that he did yesterday.

It is strange, on the whole, that there are not really more suicides.

Hosts of people are finding life tiresome. Why, then, do they not end it?

There are several ways by which the finishing touch can be put painlessly. Why are not more people resorting to them?

Clergymen are constantly encountering people who say that they are going to the river. But they do not go, not one in a thousand of them.

Is it because they think that becoming too full of water may be uncomfortable? Is it that when the balance is finally struck between the comforts and the discomforts of their life there is still found to be a balance on the comfort side?

Or is it because they suspect that killing does not perhaps put the finishing touch?

Whatever may be the reason of it, there is in the mind of most of us a certain sanctity attaching to life that it is not easy either to explain or to evade.

A Forger Who Might Teach a Safe Lesson

A MAN can teach with effect only that which he has acquired by his own experience.

A blind man cannot talk persuasively about light, nor an angel discourse with copper upon iniquity.

To be a genuine temperance orator one should have been the victim of alcoholism, and it needs a forger to be able to argue appealingly about the evils of counterfeiting.

That is why one Peter Van Vlissingen of Chicago would be a valuable adjunct to any pulpit desirous of inculcating, to a congregation of business men, a whole some lesson on commercial irregularities.

It is said that he is a past master in forgery, having been twenty years cultivating himself in the art and having practised it to the tune of more than a million dollars.

There are some things which it is advantageous to know, that only a victim can understand.

There is a bright side, then, even to iniquity—a way of considering the matter which Christ in one instance mentions approvingly.

Van Vlissigen in a recent address names four maxims which were guaranteed by his own experience as a commercial crook the most elementary and fundamental of which he stated to be, "Be honest in small things."

A Single Penny to Bridge Between Honesty and Rascality

A single penny measures the whole distance between rascality and integrity.

In the rainbow, colors shade into one another and there is no definite spot where yellow leaves off and green begins.

Van Vlissigen would say, speaking from his own experience, that it is not with virtues and vices as it is with prismatic colors; that honesty does not shade into dishonesty, but that honesty is one side of a chasm and speculation the other side, and that one cent is a big enough bridge to span the abyss.

He was once known as "Honest Pete" and became a great forger by preliminary practice as a little forger.

It is with big iniquities as it is with plays put upon the stage with large scenic effects—they have to be prepared for by quiet and unostentatious rehearsals.
